Factions Map Strategy for Meeting Here Next Monday.

Miss Perkins Visits Roosevelt at Home

Unions Must Overcome Bitterness From Two Years of Strife.

By William V. Neisly.

While President Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Perkins were conferring yesterday at Hyde Park, N. Y., on general labor problems before the country, leaders of the two mighty labor organizations were mapping strategy for their peace conference here next Monday.

Reunion between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, if it ever is accomplished, will entail long weeks or months of deliberation and conciliation, it was agreed among Government labor officials deeply interested in the project. The great mass of detailed debate and argument needed to solve numerous secondary problems that have developed in two years of strife between the two organizations made the reunion task, in the eyes of some officials, well-nigh hopeless.

To Explore Possibilities.

Officials of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. were slow in returning to the Capital from their simultaneous meetings in Denver and Atlantic City, respectively, but this week was expected to bring an influx for preparatory talks before the two opposing committees actually sit down at a conference table next week.

The meeting was arranged only as a preliminary one, designed to explore possibility of finding a basis on which a general conference can be arranged. The ten-man C. I. O. committee will meet with three men on the A. F. of L. group named two years ago to discuss peace at any time the C. I. O. was willing. Whether the Federation group will be enlarged to the size of the opposing committee has not been revealed, though William Green, A. F. of L. president, said it could be if necessary.

Roosevelt, Miss Perkins Confer.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 17 (AP).—Labor problems and wage-hour legislation received President Roosevelt's primary attention today as Secretary Perkins detoured here on her way to Washington to make a personal report.

The Labor Department Secretary, en route to the Capital from Connecticut, came to the temporary White House on her own notion.

She found the Chief Executive engaged in gathering data on which to base his message to the special session of Congress next month, on whose calendar minimum wages, maximum hours and anti-child labor legislation have been placed after surplus crop control.

The two also had an opportunity to go over the whole labor situation and the filling of the important post of Assistant Secretary of Labor made vacant recently by resignation of Edward F. McGrady.

The President interrupted consultations with Samuel I. Rosenman, New York State Supreme Court Justice, to talk with the only woman Cabinet officer.

A week-end guest at the Roosevelt home, Justice Rosenman has long been an adviser to the Presi-

If you will turn to the page opposite the editorial page today you will find another of Westbrook Pegler's highly popular "Fair Enough" columns.

As you read through it you will discover why it is so often asked: "Did you read what Pegler said today?" or, another popular expression: "Wait until Pegler writes on that one."

You will learn why he is famed for speaking his own mind, for his disregard for tradition or position. You may or may not agree with him, but you will be glad you got his slant on the subject.

All Park Loiterers Rounded Up In Search for Slasher of Coed

Sole Suspect Released; Man Like Assailant Is Seen Elsewhere.

Park police last night combed Rock Creek Park for all male loiterers in a determined effort to avenge the brutal knifing of Ruth McMillen, 19-year-old George Washington honor student, by a sex maniac there Saturday.

The manhunt was spurred by release from No. 6 Precinct of the sole suspect, a painter, arrested a few minutes after the crime. Although this man, police said, generally answered a description of the attacker and had an awl in his pocket which might have inflicted the dangerous wounds on Miss McMillen's chest, neck and face, several factors pointed to his innocence.

Among these was the fact that a man definitely answering the description of her assailant given by the girl had been seen by a number of persons in a fashionable residential neighborhood. The man held was not the man seen by these people. Another factor was that the man arrested had no blood on his clothes or person and there was none on the awl in his pocket.

Sergt. Stanley G. Kitchen, of park police, said the park was surrounded as soon as possible after the attack on Miss McMillen, but it was believed the maniac had escaped through the Zoo gate, which, at that time, was open.

RUTH McMILLEN.

Miss McMillen was still confined to bed at her home, 219 Whittier street northwest, where she lives with her uncle, Robert A. Young. She was taken home Saturday night after treatment at Emergency Hospital for cuts on her chest, neck and lips.

The attack occurred at a lonely

'Certain Questions of the Day' Only Clew to Nature of His Address.

Keen political interest in the Capital was aroused last night by an announcement from Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee for the Presidency last year, that he would address the voters of the Nation by radio on "certain questions of the day" tomorrow night.

The former Kansas Governor gave no indication of the nature of his talk, his statement from Topeka, according to the Associated Press, merely saying:

"As the Republican standard-bearer in the 1936 campaign, I desire to call a Nation-wide mass meeting over the radio at 8:30 to 9 o'clock, Central standard time, over the N. B. C. blue network, Tuesday, October 19.

"I wish to discuss with you certain questions of the day."

Immediately there was speculation on whether he would discuss the much-debated proposal for a midterm convention of the Republican Party to survey the political situation and make the party's attitude known on various questions.

Hoover's Hand Seen.

The proposal has been actively sponsored by former President Herbert Hoover, but his successor as G. O. P. Presidential nominee has evinced little favor for it. Hoover has done much corresponding and personal contact work with Republican figures throughout the country in the interest of the plan, and in some circles his activity has been taken as indicating a desire to seek "vindication" as the 1940 Presidential nominee.

In any event, it was pointed out last night, such a broadcast as that tomorrow night will give the Kansan an opportunity to reassert and emphasize his leadership in the party, as its most recent presidential selection.

The Republican National Committee has been summoned to meet in Chicago November 5 to consider the mid-term convention plan, and Landon's radio talk might be expected to have a pronounced effect on the committee's meeting, should he devote himself to that issue. The 1936 nominee is said to feel the question of holding a convention should be left largely to the sitting Republican members of Congress who must seek

Dr. Morley Dies; Educator and Mathematician

Hopkins Professor, Father of The Post's Editor, is Heart Attack Victim.

Dr. Frank Morley, educator and mathematician, father of Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, died yesterday of a heart attack at his home in Baltimore. He was 77 years old September 9.

Dr. Morley was stricken aboard a steamer bringing him from England a week ago and, at his expressed desire, was taken to Baltimore on landing in New York Tuesday. With him at his death were Mrs. Morley and two sons, Felix Morley and Christopher D. Morley, the author. A third son, Frank V. Morley, is in England, where he is a publisher.

For 40 years a resident of Baltimore, Dr. Morley was professor emeritus of mathematics in Johns Hopkins at the time of his death.

Father of three sons, all of whom were Rhodes scholars, and all of whom attained prominence in literary pursuits, Dr. Morley himself was author of many treatises on mathematics. The greatest part of his life was dedicated to passing down to successive generations some of his mastery of this subject.

Born in England.

Dr. Morley was born in Woodbridge, Suffolk, England, September 9, 1860, and was graduated from King's College, Cambridge University, in 1883. From Cambridge he received the degrees of master of arts (1886) and doctor of science (1898).

While working for his master's degree, Dr. Morley, in 1884, became a master at Bath College, England, where he continued until 1887. Through the interest of President Isaac Sharpless, of Haverford College, he came to this country in 1887, and served successively as instructor and professor of pure mathematics at this Pennsylvania institution.

His three sons were born at Haverford, though the youngest, Frank V., returned to England, where he is now a member of the firm of Faber & Faber, publishers, in London.

Served Hopkins 28 Years.

In 1900, at the instance of President Daniel Coit Gilman, Dr. Morley came to Johns Hopkins University to head the department of

Man Overboard From Bridge Lands in Shallows, Then Jail

It seems there should be plenty of room on Highway Bridge for anybody, even at the height of Sunday afternoon traffic, but Hugh Tison, 26, of the 1400 block of Sixteenth street northwest didn't find it so.

Early in the afternoon he was observed by Maynard L. McDonald, bridge tender, making his way along a walkway. Tison halted at the rail, McDonald said, stood there a few moments as if in meditation and then gracefully toppled overboard.

No doubt Tison was surprised at taking a dive of some 30 feet so unexpectedly, but how much greater must his surprise have been when, instead of splashing into untold depths, he found himself standing in only 4 feet of water.

Before he could emit more than a couple of good yells for help, McDonald was there with a rope which Tison, with no little difficulty, affixed about his person. Hauled to the bridge, he entered a taxi and left the scene.

The taxi driver, though, drove his passenger to the Fourth Precinct, where Tison was booked on a charge of intoxication. Later he was taken to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

U. S. Clamps Rigid Rules On Aviators

Course of 'Blind' Flights Must Be Approved in Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New and stringent air traffic rules to make flying safer will go into effect November 1.

The regulations, announced yesterday, are the result of nearly two years of study by the Bureau of Air Commerce in airway traffic control.

Two types of flight rules are established. The first are for contact flights (those made when weather conditions are sufficiently good to preclude collision hazards), the second for instrument flights (made when weather conditions are such that planes might not avoid collision hazards unless definite restrictions are imposed).

Under the new air-traffic rules contact flights may be made under virtually no restrictions other than broad "rules of the road."

Instrument flights, however, must be made under rigid restrictions. For example:

Pilots must have an instrument rating and their planes must carry complete instrument equipment, including two-way radio.

A definite flight plan—including information on the point of first intended landing, proposed cruising altitudes and air speeds, estimated elapsed time until arrival at destination, and an alternate airport—must be submitted and approved before departure.

Pilots shall not make changes in their flight plans while en route without the approval of the station area in which the flight is progressing.

Green, amber and red airways are marked out with prescribed altitude levels and altitude crossing levels. Green airways have the right of way, amber gives way to the green, and the red to both amber and green.

Controlled airports and zones are defined. A controlled airport is one where directional radio facilities are established, and a controlled zone is the area within a 3-mile radius of a controlled airport.

Planes must carry sufficient fuel not only to complete the projected flight, but also enough to reach an alternate airport and still have enough for 45 minutes additional flight.

Private Flyers Hail Rule.

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Issuance of new regulations by the Bureau of Air Commerce governing private flying on the Nation's airways closed a squabble of several years' standing between the light plane owner and the transport operators.

"Recognition of our problems," said Grove Webster, founder of the Private Fliers Association, "means encouragement to the average citizen to own an airplane."

Heretofore, the transport operators consistently have complained there were too many airplanes aloft for safe flying in view of the limitations on height and direction of

Owner Who Fled Stricken Titanic Dies as Recluse

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 18 (Monday).—Joseph Bruce Ismay, 74 years old, former owner of the White Star Line and former president of the International Mercantile Marine Co., who survived the Titanic disaster, died Sunday.

Ismay was severely criticized for allowing himself to be rescued from the Titanic. He married Julia Florence Schieffelin, of New York.

The Titanic struck an iceberg on the North Atlantic April 14, 1912, and sank with 1,635 persons aboard. Among the dead were John Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, Benjamin Guggenheim and Maj. Archibald Butts, aide to President Taft.

Ismay died without making any statement on the Titanic. One of the ship's officers said 22 years later:

"Ismay did the worst thing he ever did in his life when he got into that lifeboat."

Ismay denied at a Senate investigation hearing that he seized a lifeboat with another man and urged the crew to push off while women and children remained on the decks of his ship. The White Star Line, of which Ismay was then chairman, owned the vessel.

He became a recluse and although a rich man never again appeared at any public function. A year later he resigned his chairmanship. His father had founded the line. To the end he refused to discuss the Titanic disaster.

New Planes Batter Ships Of Japanese

Russian, French Origin Hinted for Bombers of Great Speed.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Monday), Oct. 18.—The Chinese air force early today unleashed its heaviest onslaught against the concentrated Japanese positions at Shanghai since the beginning of the war in mid-August.

Low-flying Chinese warplanes roared over Shanghai in successive waves, raining bombs on the lower Whangpoo River area, where the majority of Japan's fleet rode at anchor and on the Japanese airfield beyond the eastern borders of the International Settlement.

Japanese warship batteries and antiaircraft emplacements rocked the city with furious fusillades in an effort to beat off the raiders.

Russian Origin Hinted.

Shanghai was showered with shell fragments, deadly steel falling over the entire International Settlement.

The increasingly heavier Chinese raids gave substance to unconfirmed reports China was receiving renewed supplies of aircraft from Russia and France.

The newly acquired craft were reported to be capable of tremendous speeds.

Throughout the raids the flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet, the cruiser Augusta, lay close by the Japanese fleet. Bullets and shell fragments churned the waters of the Whangpoo all about her.

French Consulate Hit.

Throughout Sunday the Japanese swept the 25-mile Chinese line stretching stubbornly from the North Station to the muddy Yangtze, with intensified artillery fire as cover for a concerted drive on the Miaohang sector near the midpoint of the battle front.

The bitterest fighting of the two-month-old battle for the city's approaches swirled about the tomb of "China's Unknown Soldier," dedicated to heroes who died fighting the Japanese at Miaohang in the "Shanghai War" of 1932. Both Chinese and Japanese casualties were said to be heaviest thus far in the Shanghai struggle.

At Nanking the Chinese foreign office announced China's acceptance of the Belgian invitation to attend a conference at Brussels October 30 of the signatories of the nine-power pact of 1922 guaranteeing China's territorial integrity.

Japan Checked in North.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), Oct. 18.—The Japanese today appeared to have suffered their severest reverses of the Chinese war in the northwest campaign where "flying columns" of Chu Teh, China's famed "Red Napoleon," reportedly had cut through their rear guard and isolated three divisions.

Japanese deprecated the report, pointing out that even if it were true, Japanese advances in Hopei, where they have penetrated to within 60 miles of the Honan border, would counteract reverses in Shansi to the west, making it impossible for Chinese to hold out any length of time.

Nevertheless, reports from both sides indicated the veteran Eighth Route Army, composed of campaigners of the old "Red Army" and crack Nanking troops, had put a crimp in the general northwest campaign and made it necessary for the Japanese to rush reinforcements.

Styles Rouse 'Beastly Passions,' Peril Christianity, Says Pastor

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 17.—Dr. Bernard C. Clausen told his congregation at the First Baptist Church tonight he considered the modern trend of dress among women as "deliberately seductive," adding that the "fashions now are infecting the men, too."

"The newest fashions for women," asserted the minister, "are barbaric in their luxurious display and repudiate all the simplicity and efficiency which produces orderly life.

"Worst of all, they are deliberately seductive. Beastly passions are too easily aroused. This year presents an array of intentional incitements which will leave their mark in our criminal records."

Speaking of the men, the Rev. Dr. Clausen said there are now fashion shows, style magazines, cosmetics, perfumes and expert advisers on the mode for males.

"The last bulwark of sensible simplicity is tottering," he added. "When it goes, the sexes will be involved in a wild rivalry of style, and Christian ideals may be forgotten."

U. S. Congressmen Pledge Aid To Madrid After Viewing Army

Rep. O'Connell Tells Spain's International Brigade 'President Roosevelt Has Changed Foreign Policy;' Bride Accompanies Him.

By the Associated Press.

Albacete, Spain, Oct. 17.—The first American Congressmen to visit war-torn Spain today watched the international volunteer brigade celebrate its first anniversary and pledged themselves to work in Washington for the Spanish government cause.

Jerry O'Connell, Montana Democrat, and John T. Bernard, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, spent the day watching the brigade's first parade and visiting a nearby training camp where Americans, Canadians, Englishmen and Spaniards are being put in condition by American officers.

"President Roosevelt's Chicago speech changed the foreign policy of the United States," O'Connell told 800 recruits lined up at the camp about 140 miles southeast of Madrid.

"The American doesn't know too much about Spain. We are here to get the facts on this struggle, for on its outcome depends the liberty and democracy of the entire world. I will say we ought to support Spain in every way we know how."

O'Connell complimented the Asturian miners, who have fought for the government cause in north Spain, in behalf of the miners of Montana, and said he would tell American miners "they must fight in common cause with you for the common people of the world."

Bernard, calling the Spanish war of "world-wide importance," said it would "strike a deathblow to Hitler and Mussolini."

"I am going back to America imbued with more enthusiasm than before to awaken the heart of America in behalf of the Spanish Republic," he declared.

The Congressmen, accompanied by Mrs. O'Connell, reviewed several thousand troops representing units of the international brigade, which is now being dissolved as a separate unit and absorbed into the Spanish government army.

7,000 Loyalists Trapped, Gijon Defense Riven

Brilliant Flanking Thrust Paves Way for Advance by Franco's Army.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 17.—A brilliantly executed flank thrust which trapped 7,000 Asturian loyalists in a rugged mountain triangle west of the Sella River, tonight broke the stubborn defense of Gijon and paved the way for capture of that port by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent army.

The flank maneuver was carried out by Col. Garcia Vallin's First Brigade of famed "Navarre Requetes," regarded as the finest fighters in the Spanish rebel armies.

Avoiding a frontal battle against the strong Asturian troops, which would have been a difficult and bloody engagement, Vallin swung his brigade off the Asturian flank and cut through from the rear in a lightning thrust that military experts believe may decide the fate of Gijon.

The Nationalist columns are now only 16 miles from the last important loyalist port on the northern coast.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 17.—A government offensive in the Zaragoza sector in northeastern Spain today brought on one of the bitterest battles of the civil war. Military dispatches said 400,000 men were engaged.

Slayer of 2 Back-Tracks Route of His Grisly Ride

South Paris, Me., Oct. 17 (AP).—Back-tracking by air the gruesome trail police say he took with two death-silenced passengers, 18-year-old Paul Dwyer returned today to this little town to face charges of murdering his elderly benefactors, Dr. and Mrs. James G. Littlefield.

The youth stumbled from a plane which brought him to Portland from North Arlington, N. J., where police found him asleep at the wheel of an automobile in which the bodies of this town's kindly physician and his wife were secreted.

Tommy Manville Picks Wife No. 5 Pending Divorce

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Tommy Manville announced tonight that he has Mrs. Manville No. 5 picked out, and will marry her as soon as Mrs. Manville No. 4—now in Reno—obtains a divorce.

His bride-to-be, he said, is Miss Nina Pierson, who returned three days ago from a three-year residence in Europe.

The heir to the asbestos fortune said his current wife, Marcelle Edwards, would obtain her divorce in Reno within ten days.

Miss Pierson, a blonde, dimpled former entertainer, is a native of Duluth, Minn. She said her father was Andrew Pierson, "a retired banker, who now lives in a marvelous house in California."

Ultimatum Threatens to Deadlock Parley on 'Volunteers.'

Rebels' Italians Placed at 65,000

Paris Says Loyalists Have Only 20,000 Alien Fighters.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 17.—France sent the Spanish "volunteers" crisis toward a dangerous deadlock tonight by insisting that Generalissimo Francisco Franco demobilize at least four of his mercenary insurgent soldiers for every man withdrawn from the loyalist ranks.

The French Ambassador to London, Andre Charles Corbin, received curt orders from Paris to "stand by his guns" against the Nazi-Fascist bloc when the London nonintervention committee meets again Tuesday.

The moribund neutrality body of 27 nations is attempting, through its chairman's subcommittee of nine powers, to find the basis of a bargain whereby Italy will call home her thousands of Black Shirt legionnaires serving with Franco's insurgents.

At yesterday's meeting of the subcommittee the Italian Ambassador, Dino Grandi, announced that Italy agreed to a "symbolic" withdrawal of her Black Shirts, providing Franco is granted belligerent rights and an equal withdrawal is made from the loyalist forces.

France contends Franco has 100,000 foreign volunteers—about 65,000 of them Italians—while the Valencia government has only 20,000 or 25,000, and that an equal withdrawal of volunteers would result in an unfair advantage to Franco.

Move Troops to Libya.

Naples, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—The army transport Toscana sailed tonight for Libya with 1,885 Black Shirt troops and 145 officers to strengthen Premier Mussolini's garrisons along the Tunisian and Egyptian frontiers. Nearly 80,000 troops have sailed to the north African colony in two weeks, and it was indicated that Italian military strength there soon would reach 100,000 men.

Ocean Yields Vast Radium Source To Fight Cancer

By the United Press.

Existence of radium in ocean bottom sediments is of particular significance, Piggott said in a report published in the Smithsonian Institution yearbook.

"The material at the bottom of the deeper parts," he said, "generally consists of so-called red clay, and it appears to contain much more radium than any rocks yet examined on land."

Wary Jockeying To Delay Actual China Parley

Question of Whether to Ask Reds and Reich Must Be Decided First.

By the Associated Press.

A program or cautious diplomatic maneuvers lay ahead of the American delegation last night as it prepared to sail next week for the Nine-Power Teraty Conference at Brussels on the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Indications are that Norman H. Davis, the United States' delegate, and his advisers may have to participate in considerable preliminary jockeying before they can place before the conference their Government's primary objective of bringing about an agreed peace between China and Japan.

Informed observers say discussion is likely to arise over the question of inviting nations, such as Soviet Russia and possibly Germany. While they are not signers of the Nine-Power Treaty guaranteeing China's territorial and administrative sovereignty they have wide interests in the Far East.

Nations Divided on Russia.

The question may be presented at the opening session of the conference on October 30. Some nations, including the United States, are represented as favoring Russian participation in the proceedings. Others are understood to be opposed on the ground that the parley should be limited strictly to nations party to the treaty.

It is considered almost certain, however, that Japan will lead a fight to prevent admission of a Soviet delegation if the Tokyo government decides to attend.

Preparation of an agenda of conferring procedure is expected to await settlement of this issue. It may be some time after October 30 before the conference finds it possible to get down to the real business—stipulated in the Belgian government's invitation to all the nine powers—of "examining the situation in the Far East and to study peaceable means of hastening the end of the regrettable conflict which prevails there."

Davis will sail for Brussels October 20, aboard the United States liner Washington. He will be accompanied by Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief State Department political adviser on Far Eastern affairs, and Jay Pierrepont Moffatt, chief of the department's European division, as advisers, and Robert T. Pell and Charles E. Bohlen, State Department attaches.

Soviet Scales Pay Of Theater Artists From $120 to $10

Moscow, Oct. 17 (AP). — Soviet actors, singers and other concert artists were disclosed today to have been graded according to their talents and put on a fixed wage scale by the all-union art committee.

The newspaper Soviet Art said the action was taken to scale down high salaries of some stars, encourage development of new talent and make good concerts cheaper for workers' clubs.

Artists with "a false idea of their prestige," the paper said, have been asking 1,000 rubles ($200 at the official exchange) for ten-minute performances. The new wage scale for single performances ranges from a maximum of $120 for first-rate artists to a minimum of $10 for fourth-rate performers.

10,000 in London Ask Japan Boycott

London, Oct. 17 (AP).—A mass meeting of 10,000 persons in Trafalgar square today demanded an economic boycott against Japan because of her invasion of China. Speakers disclosed a boycott movement already is under way.

The demonstration was organized by the London Labor Party and the London Trades Council. Walter Green, labor member of Parliament, said the Royal Arsenal Co-operative Society had decided to buy no more goods from Japan and said he "understood" the London Co-operative Society had taken similar action. The Co-operative Wholesale Society was likely to follow suit, Green said.

Repairs Completed On Reims Cathedral

Reims, France, Oct. 17 (AP).—Restoration of world-famous Reims Cathedral, severely damaged during the World War, was completed today. The repair work, to which the late John D. D. C. Must Employ Log-Rolling For Fair Deal, Says Mrs. Wiley

MRS. ANNA KELTON WILEY.

Kalorama Citizens' Head Thinks Local Government Is Basically Sound, But Sees Great Possibilities If Residents Secured Vote.

By Christian Sadler.

The District of Columbia need not expect a fair deal from Congress until it gets representatives on Capitol Hill to do some log rolling, in the opinion of Anna Kelton Wiley, president of the Kalorama Citizens Association and one of America's foremost women leaders.

"No need for us to kid ourselves. We should have someone on the scene working for us the entire year, someone who is intensely interested in the welfare of Washington and has the power to say, 'If you don't vote for my bill, I won't vote for yours,'" Mrs. Wiley declared.

That's the composite opinion of her association, too. Unlike many other civic groups around the town, however, the K. C. A. thinks the local government situation is basically good. There are local troubles, yes; but they can be traced to the powerlessness of the District to vote back at Congress through representatives of its own.

"I'm keen on national representation. I think we should have one Senator and Representatives in proportion to our population," Mrs. Wiley said, "but I don't stand for local suffrage."

Had $5.22 in Treasury.

When Mrs. Wiley became the Kalorama president two terms ago, there was but $5.22 in the treasury. It's not a rich group yet; but it has 80 paid-up members, a much-increased surplus, and some of the most civic-minded leaders in Washington.

Among movements it has sponsored or opposed are:

1. The Jefferson Memorial, which it opposed for the tidal basin, but favored in the form of a public building located on Temple Heights in the Kalorama area. (The old Kalorama estate was owned by a friend of Jefferson's and he often visited there.)

2. A permanent board of estimates for the District, consisting of "the Commissioners, a representative of the Secretary of the Interior, a representative of the Bureau of the Budget, and such other officials as may seem proper."

This board would make a report on the complicated tax situation each year, in an effort to prove the proper contribution the Federal Treasury should make to expenses of the District. Mrs. Wiley believes this idea is one of the smartest ones the association has had. She considers the Jacobs report, which influenced Congress in lessening its aid to Washington, to be unfair and unjust.

The Kalorama group last year sponsored a sales tax as fair and easily carried. Mrs. Wiley declares the business tax levied instead to be a "hidden sales tax" that will be passed on to the public. "We must fight hard to prevent it being renewed," she said.

3. Erection of the abattoir was opposed by the Kalorama citizens, but Mrs. Wiley personally is not so sure some good industries would not help the city meet its expenses. "We've got to have money from somewhere," she declared. "The Government keeps taking more property out of taxation and giving us a smaller sum to go on."

Mrs. Wiley worked so hard against the "Red rider" she was called a Communist "and everything else," but she has been fighting for what she considers right for many years. She was one of the women who went to prison in 1917 for picketing the White House as part of their drive to obtain woman suffrage. While she was in jail she smuggled out food, which was tested by her husband, the late Dr. Harvey Wiley—and found to be terrible. She's been working for better jail conditions ever since.

Although she is interested in so many civic movements she devotes about 18 hours a day to the work, Mrs. Wiley is quick to assure that the two things for which she will never stop fighting are equal rights for men and women—guaranteed by a Constitutional amendment—and modernization of the pure food laws sponsored by her husband.

Mrs. Wiley is president of the Women's City Club, which nominated her for the Citizens' Service Award for 1936; past president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Club; was the first president of the Consumers' League of Washington; four times president of the Housekeeper's Alliance; is secretary of the National Woman's Party. In addition she has been a leader in the Parent-Teacher Association, the A. A. U. W., the D. A. R., and almost everything else women are interested in around Washington.

When she returned from Mexico after a short trip last year, there were 150 pieces of "business" mail in her box. Next year, she declares, she will resign from everything, take a trip around the world, and then settle down to enjoy her two grandchildren.

On Wednesday—Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Russia Executes 9 As Polish Plotters

Moscow, Oct. 17 (AP).—Execution of nine local officials of the Zhlobin district in the White Russian Republic for plotting insurrection against the Soviet regime in case of war with Poland and Germany was reported today by a Minsk newspaper.

The officials were convicted of organizing terrorism at the behest of the Polish intelligence service, raiding villages and robbing and beating peasants in collective farms.

Y. M. Lekherzak, former secretary of the regional Communist party committee, who headed the list of accused officials, was quoted as confessing he was a Trotskyist.

People's Front Wins Solidly in French Election

All Cabinet Members Keep Seats in Local Votes; Chautemps Secure.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 17.—The People's Front, union of Leftist political parties, won a solid victory in today's run-off cantonal elections, virtually complete returns showed, assuring Premier Camille Chautemps' government of continued support.

All cabinet members won in the local run-offs, held to decide elecwon a clear majority a week ago. won a clea rmajority a week ago.

Unofficial returns gave People's Front candidates 694 of the contested local council seats divided thus: Radical Socialists, 483; Socialists, 188; Communists, 23. Rightist opposition parties won about 500 seats.

On the basis of this vote there will be little change in the lineup of regional councils with the Radical Socialists holding the greatest strength.

The results were interpreted in political quarters to mean a general stabilization of conditions with Chautemps' policy of a "breathing spell' from social reform confirmed by popular support. It was considered also that a healthier atmosphere was provided for the French franc and the government's position made more secure for the return of Parliament in November.

St. Louis Woman Clubbed in Japan

Tokyo, Oct. 17 (AP).—Unidentified assailants clubbed and severely injured an American woman, Mrs. Steven Davies, near the Italian consulate in Yokohama tonight. She was removed to a hospital there in what was believed to be a serious condition. Motive for the attack was not ascertained. Her purse was untouched. Her husband, an employe of the Standard Oil Co., is ill in a hospital. She was unescorted. She was reported to be a native of St. Louis, Mo.

Leipzig Is Uproarious In Greeting to Windsor

Leipzig, Germany, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor received an uproarious welcome tonight when they arrived here after a day-long train ride from Essen on their housing study tour of the Reich. Though it was nearly midnight when their train pulled in, a large crowd met them at the station and followed them to their hotel.

The crowd continued cheering at the hotel until the former British monarch appeared on a balcony and said, "We thank you for your hearty welcome."

Britain Launches Study Of the Cost of Living

London, Oct. 17 (AP).—Ernest Brown, minister of labor, will begin tomorrow a year's inquiry to find out the cost of living in Great Britain.

The wages of 1,250,000 workers still are governed by an index figure on living costs compiled from prewar prices. Brown believes it is about time there was a new one. The new figure will be based on working class family needs, a widely used basis for the regulation of wages.

Boris Handles Throttle Opening New Rail Line

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 17 (AP).—King Boris III today was at the throttle of a locomotive that hauled a train-load of notables, including Queen Ionna, over a new railroad between Dupnica and Corna Djumaja in central Bulgaria. Inaugurating the 20.5-mile long railway, which cost about 80,000,000 leva ($800,000), the King emphasized its economic importance to the nation.

British Set Fire To Arab Homes As Riots Spread

Machine Guns Guard the Highways as Anti-Jew Revolt Grows.

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 17.—Maj. Gen. A. P. Wavell, commander of 10,000 British troops in the Holy Land, tohight ordered the homes of Arab terrorists burned after a day of rioting and killings over virtually all Palestine.

Troops acting under direct orders from the commander set fire to Arab homes at Lydda, near Jerusalem, where marauders yesterday fired Kalandia Airport buildings with a loss of $50,000. Sixty persons were arrested at Lydda on technical charges of violating the British curfew law.

Main highways were dotted with machine-gun squads, but the terrorism continued and even appeared to be spreading.

A bus returning to Jerusalem tonight with workmen from the American-owned quarry near Motza was fired on from ambush. There were no casualties.

Many believed that martial law would be imposed within 24 hours unless the violence subsides.

Jerusalem, Oct. 17 (AP).—A movement to convert the strife-torn Holy Land into a British crown colony offered a new solution tonight to the trouble between Jews and Arabs.

The proposal took form in an application to the Palestine attorney general's office to register an organization called "the Palestine Crown Colony Association." The movement is led by Max Seligman, a former Cardiff, Wales, lawyer, practicing in Tel Aviv, who until now has been officially discouraged from promoting the association.

Milan, (Monday) Oct. 18 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, today denounced Great Britain in connection with the Palestine riots.

"The news from Palestine cannot but arouse a sense of horror throughout the civilized world," the newspaper said. "The laws, which for thousands of years guaranteed justice to civilized mankind are openly trampled on and innocent citizens are punished for deeds for which they bear no responsibility.

"No one entrusted anyone with the mandate to sow destruction and massacre in the Holy Land."

Senator Reynolds Hits 9-Power Pact

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 17 (AP).—Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, said in an interview here the United States made a serious mistake when it signed the Nine-Power Pact.

Senator Reynolds, national grand master of the Moose Lodge, discussed politics freely last night after addressing his fraternal brothers.

"We made a grave mistake in ever signing the Nine-Power Pact," he said. "And we have no business in Asiatic waters today. The time is past when the United States needs go around pulling chestnuts from the fire for other nations.

"We really ought to thank Japan for cleaning up every scrap heap and junk yard in the country."

Mrs. Thomas Hardy Dies.

London, Oct. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Thomas Hardy, widow of the novelist, died today. She and Hardy were married in 1914, two years after the death of his first wife. She had been his secretary for many years and devoted much of her time to writing a biography of her husband, who died in 1928.

Tribute Is Paid District Youth Killed in Spain

Memorial services were held yesterday at the Washington Hotel for Sidney Shosteck, youthful Washington labor leader, who was killed in Spain on September 5 while fighting for the loyalist government.

Speaking from a platform laden with flowers, contributed by friends of Shosteck and of democracy in Spain, Phil Bard, former cartoonist and national secretary of the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion, said that "Sidney Shosteck was not a romantic person" but went to war because of his sense of duty to the cause which was his life's work. Bard revealed that Shosteck had been promoted to a lieutenant in the International Brigade, and it had not been really necessary for him to take the risk of going to the front.

At the end of his speech, Bard made a plea for funds for the Abraham Lincoln Battalion, and nearly $500 was contributed by the 500 persons attending.

Appearing in the uniform of the People's Army of Spain, George Ades, comrade of Shosteck in the loyalist trenches, eulogized the Washington youth and attacked the critics of the loyalist cause.

Poor Bicycle Rider, Policeman Ends Life

Budapest, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—Traffic Policeman Johann Balazs committed suicide at the police station today because of chagrin over his bicycling ability Twice during the last week, while on duty, Balazs' bicycle had knocked down women pedestrians.

Neither woman was injured, but Balazs, after reporting the second case, pulled out his service revolver and shot himself.

Quezon Urges Freedom in '39 For Philippines

By the United Press.

Manila (Monday), Oct. 18.—Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippines Commonwealth, bluntly told the National Assembly at its opening session today to make up its mind now whether the Islands want complete independence, and not "dilatorily" delay the issue until 1946.

Under the Philippine independence act, passed by the United States Congress, the islands become free in 1946.

Quezon, who has proposed to President Roosevelt that the ten-year "probationary period" established by the act be shortened to end in 1939, warned the Assembly "not to deceive ourselves with the grondless hope that by 1946 every danger will have vanished."

"I see no reason why, if independence can be granted in 1946, it cannot be granted in 1939," he said. "If we cannot be independent now, because some objection of sufficient gravity may justify the denial, then the same objection may still exist in 1946.

"Any obstacle vitally affecting our chances as a successful and everlastingly independent nation in 1939 cannot be overcome by 1946.

"Hence, if we want independence at any cost, and are ready to take all the consequences—dangers as well as advantages—let's have it not later than 1939.

"If those opposed to my proposal believe security and liberty and prosperity and peace for the Philippines lies in some kind of political partnership with the United States, they should say so openly instead of dilatorily believeing that prior to 1946, some unforseen event will prevent the establishment of the Philippines Republic.

"My main reason for asking independence not later than 1939 is due to the fact I am convinced it will be to our best interests to obtain independence during the Roosevelt Administration."

Gift of $2,000 Launches Drive To Help Church

Rev. Anderson Calls Post Column 'Essentially Religious' Work.

The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, minister of historic First Congregational Church where President Calvin Coolidge worshiped, took advantage of services yesterday in observance of his first anniversary as pastor to announce a "Forward Movement" for the church in 1938.

Launched with a $2,000 contribution from an anonymous donor, the "Forward Movement" calls for addition to the church staff of an assistant minister, the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., and greater expenditures for religious education. The Rev. Mr. Borchers took up his duties yesterday.

Describing the column as "more than conventional advice to the lovelorn," Dr. Anderson said:

"The comprehensiveness of her interest and wisdom is a constant source of marvel and admiration to me. She is editing a column of advice on every sort of personal problem: financial, moral, intellectual, social, religious and emotional. Her comments run the gamut of human needs."

Dr. Anderson said that those who write for advice obtain a sense of release from the mere act of sharing their situation with someone else and then receive further aid in "the invariably good advice and counsel Miss Haworth gives."

"She is dealing with many folks," he added, "who would never think of approaching a clergyman, and yet her work is essentially a religious work as it seeks to correct the adjustments of dislocated personalities."

Truman to Open New Rail Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators announced yesterday they will open a public inquiry Wednesday into reorganization plans of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. and its Southwestern affiliated companies.

Initial hearings will be conducted by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, pending return to Washington of Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

Plans for the Missouri Pacific's reorganization are pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The road, now capitalized at $775,000,000, was taken over by the Van Sweringen system shortly before it ran into financial difficulties resulting from the depression.

Wheeler, who has directed an inquiry into financing of other lines in the Van Sweringen system, has sought to delay Interstate Commerce Commission approval of reorganization plans pending study by his committee.

Pecora Denounces Financial Leaders

New York, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—State Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, former member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, tonight denounced financial leaders for "trying to re-create the old happy hunting ground" in the stock market by advocating revision of Government regulation policies.

Pecora, whose investigation into stock market practices several years ago led to some of the legislation to which many market leaders now object, took special exception to remarks by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank of New York, who last week blamed the stock market decline on "the cumulative effect of a variety of governmental policies" rather than on business conditions.

Red Cross Allots $20,000 to China

On recommendation of Nelson T. Johnson, United States Ambassador to China, the American Red Cross yesterday dispatched $20,000 to Nanking for Chinese and foreign relief organizations.

Agencies to receive aid include St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai, the health department of the Shanghai Municipal Council and the International Red Cross Committee for Shanghai.

Ernest J. Swift, vice-chairman of the Red Cross in charge of insular and foreign operations, said allotments sent to China since beginning of the conflict there total $161,000, all for direct relief with exception of $20,000 for evacuation of American citizens from danger zones.

Cold Railroad Brakemen Win Heated Seats All Their Own

Bill Jones, of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, shows the kind of seat provided for brakemen on the R. F. & P. The railroads will replace these with softer seats but they have five years in which to make the change.

New Regulation Will Give Freight Train Assistants Comforts Equal to Engineer's; Special Chairs for Them Will Be Cushioned.

Things are looking up for brakemen who ride the head end of freight trains; soon they'll be sitting down in comfort.

Head-end brakemen have been accustomed ever since brakemen were put on the dinky little trains which first puffed along with the nation's freight, to have the tough end of working comfort. Up there on the engine, where the engineer i sking and the fireman his prime minister, he was nothing but a stepchild.

It's going to be different now, so they say.

Not only will the engineer continue to have his double-capacity throne on the right of the cab and the fireman his box on the left, the head-end brakie will have a seat all his own.

This will be no ordinary seat. It will be cushioned and have a comfortable back and armrests and it may be put up in the engine cab or it may be back on the tender. In the latter case, it will, of all things, be heated.

Effective November 1.

For these new wonders the long-abused brakie may have an agreement between the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and a committee from the Association of Railroads to thank. The agreement was reached after much study of the brakie's problems and much forrowing of brows and will become effective November 1, 1937.

Under the agreement, spring cushion seats with arm and back rests will be provided head brakemen and will be installed on locomotives used for freight service, combination freight and passenger service, and combination freight and helper service.

Such a seat either will be installed in the locomotive cab or in a shelter cab placed on the tender of the locomotive, the location being optional with the railroad.

As an added feature, heaters will be provided in the shelter cabs in territories where necessary.

Complaint Was Filed.

The railroads are allowed five years in which to install such seats in locomotives coming under the agreement. All new locomotives covered by the agreement, however, will be equipped when built.

Brakemen on passenger trains of course, do not enter into the seating problem. The passenger brakeman is very much like the conductor, and he has a seat in the regular coach.

The negotiations between the trainmen and the railroads resulted from a complaint filed by the former with the Interstate Commerce Commission in an effort to have an order issued requiring such seating facilities be furnished by all railroads.

As a result of the agreement, however, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has asked the commission to dismiss the complaint.

Hilton, chairman of the Council of the American Pharmaceutical Association, will review the "Evolution of Drugs."

Minority Blasts Coal Board's Secrecy on Pay

Threat of Investigation in Senate Opens the Personnel Lists.

By the Associated Press.

An insurgent minority of the Federal Bituminous Coal Commission, backed up by a promise of Senatorial support, won a fight Saturday to examine the commission's list of jobholders and their salaries.

Commissioner John C. Lewis, of Iowa, said his recent public appeal to Senator Herring (Democrat), Iowa, to help pry open the commission's personnel records, brought him a letter from Commission Chairman Charles F. Hosford, jr., advising him he could have the information by applying to the personnel division.

Earlier in the week the commission in a four-to-three division, turned down a resolution by Lewis asking that the personnel records be made available.

In disclosing Hosford's letter, Lewis also made public copies of replies from Herring. The Senator promised that, if necessary, he would introduce a resolution in the Senate to obtain the information.

Lewis also made public a copy of Herring's letter to Commission Secretary F. W. McCullough which stated that lack of harmony would destroy the commission's usefulness.

Herring wrote that he could not see any reason why the information sought by Commissioner Lewis "should not be available to the public."

Lewis denied that patronage was the cause of the trouble.

"Patronage is not the issue," he said today. "We want to know who is working here; how this commission is functioning. I am not complaining that I have not had my share of appointments."

Public Whimsy Again Defeats Town Namers' Uplift Crusade

Rough and Ready, Calif., Defies Reform Board; Ono, Pa., Was Crowd's Chorus to All Other Suggestions.

That painful reminder of American misnomers—the Postal Guide—is out with its annual batch of odd-named places where people get mail.

Water Proof, La.

Hot Spot, Ky.

Despite the war declared by the Board of Geographical Names on what it considers whimsy, bad-humor and ill-judgment in naming towns, the custom just won't die.

Generally speaking, under the head of whimsy come:

What Cheer, Iowa; Young America, Ind.; Social Circle, Ga.; Coy in Alabama and Arkansas; Evening Shade, Ark., Bad Axe, Mich., and Blue Eye, Mo.

And these:

Ball Ground, Georgia; Ballclub, Minnesota; Base Line, Michigan; Umpire, Arkansas; Angel Island, California, and Arkansas' Fifty Six, Figure Five, Forty Four and Ink.

There are some that go under mischief miscellany:

O. K., Kentucky.

O. K., Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The Guide's three Ono's puzzle many officials. One story is that some people in Pennsylvania, informed they could have a postoffice if they got a name, held a meeting and every time something was suggested, the crowd said—"Oh, No."

Unable to get anywhere, they finally agreed on Ono.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.

By Scott Hart.

Miss Lenroot Says—

Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief, Children's Bureau, United States Labor Department, believes that "prejudice against the employment of women in responsible positions is still a very great bar to advancement . . . and salaries paid women are likely to be lower than those paid men with equal or inferior qualifications."

Further, these differences will persist, in diminishing degree, perhaps for another generation, she feels. And she offers as a remedy an "extension of real merit systems of selection and advancement in all levels of Government." This, Miss Lenroot thinks, "is the best guarantee of the future of women in public service."

These views were stated in an article in the current issue of State Government, an issue dedicated to women in public life. And here she says firmly that to be a woman has been no handicap to advancement in the Children's Bureau. Which is undoubtedly encouraging to the women in the bureau and something to be thought on by women in other agencies who feel their sex as a drawback.

She goes into one very interesting reminiscence: "For several years the number of women executives in the Federal service was small and they were found mainly in positions whose functions related chiefly to women and children. Gradually, the number of women given recognition in fields not regarded as primarily within woman's province increased.

"Until the number became too large, occasional dinner meetings of women in responsible Federal positions were held. I recall how some of those pioneer executives charged us to remember that the way had been opened to us by the faithful, efficient service of the women who in the lower clerical ranks had demonstrated their capacity and opened the way to the participation of women in the higher levels of public administration service."

Several days ago this column saluted the I. D. R. A.'s new and pretty publication. It commended the editor, Samuel M. Barrett, and even said something nice about the printer. But withal, there was no mention of the editorial assistants who are Eva Foree Rogers, Ruth Bohne, Velma Carter and Marguerite Hayes.

Some notes from the F. C. A.: There have been several recent and welcomed appointments. Fred R. Hanscom, of Kittery, Me., comes to the administrative division, detail unit; Lois M. Fitz, of Lincoln, Nebr., and Gladys E. Love, of Florence, Ala., comes to positions in the administrative division, stenographic section, and Robert E. Findlay, of Scottdale, Pa., has been appointed to the credit union section.

A course in public speaking, similar to the one offered at the F. C. A. last spring, will be given again next spring. C. T. Akre will be the instructor. Tentative plans call for a course of 12 sessions.

Representative George A. Dondero, president, Michigan State Society of Washington, announces the opening of the organization's social season with a Halloween party and dance at the Lafayette Hotel on Saturday evening, September 30. The hours are 9:30 to 12:30. Plans are also under way for several functions during the winter months, including the annual banquet on Michigan Day.

O. J. Dompierre is chairman of the dance committee and has assisting him Alvin Missner, Mrs. Elsie Gould, Donald Luxford, Mr. and Mrs. Fillmore Stolpe, Mrs. O. J. Dompierre, Miss Fannie Sheldon, Miss Helen Pine and Mrs. E. Contee Meredith.

Back to that I. D. R. A. again—and it's always bobbing up—the editor of the publication has gone into some research and emerges with the following facts, as concern Interior personnel: Speaking alphabetically, he says, A. Aarenson has the distinction of leading the listing in the department's phone book, and Maurice Zuckerman ends it; there are 25 Smiths, 16 Joneses and 15 Johnsons.

Federal Bureau Plans Attack On Still Births

Exhaustive Study of U. S. Cases to Aid Drive for Prevention.

By the United Press.

The Children's Bureau, worried over the more than 77,000 still births registered in this country annually, has planned a new campaign to save these babies' lives, so that they may counterbalance the Nation's declining birth rate.

Dr. Ethel C. Dunham, chief of the child development research division, revealed that the Bureau is seeking the most exhaustive information on the causes of still births ever compiled.

Co-operating in the study, 229 hospitals in 26 States and the District of Columbia have filled in elaborate questionnaires on every still birth occurring in their institutions. The Children's Bureau is now working up preliminary results on 6,750 schedules obtained from February 1, 1936, to June 1.

Syphilis Deaths Preventable.

Dr. Dunham said that perhaps the most important point in the investigation will be to find out how many of these still births are preventable.

"Still births caused by syphilis are, of course, the most easily prevented," she said.

"More than one-half of the total number of women (in the cases studied) were . . . either not tested or were tested too late to have been treated. If all the women found to be syphilitic had been adequately treated throughout pregnancy, practically all or at least a large portion of their still births could have been prevented."

Syphilis was found to be a complication or a cause of the still birth in 8 per cent of the total number of cases. Thus the lives of approximately 6,000 babies now born dead could be saved simply through tests and treatment for syphilis.

Toxemia Most Common.

Dr. Dunham said adequate prenatal care would prevent a considerable proportion of still births due to toxemia, an accumulation of poisonous substances in the mother's system. The survey showed that this is the most common complication, occurring in almost a quarter of all cases of still births.

She suggested that physicians throughout the Nation who are consulted by prospective mothers should apply more generally the knowledge already available and give accurate and complete information when filling out certificatees on still births.

Dr. Dunham said that reducing the number of still births would also tend to cut down the deaths of mothers during child birth.

Women Leaders Defend Careers

At request of the Council of State Governments, Chicago, Secretary Perkins listed changes made in her administration which she believes provide "a more realistic approach" to wage-earners problems.

Senator Hattie Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, writing for the same organization, scoffed at any ideas that legislative capacity is a matter of sex.

But Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, reported that although many important fields have been opened to women, prejudice against employment of women in responsible positions still is a bar to advancement. She said also that women's salaries were likely to be lower than those paid men.

Miss Marion E. Martin, State senator from Maine, recently appointed to direct Republican women's campaign activities, said that being a woman was a "distinct advantage when running for office."

Labor Lauds Stand Against Vigilantes

A resolution praising Victory Post of the American Legion for its recent stand against any vigilante organization of Washington legionnaires was adopted last night by the executive board of the Washington Building Trades Council, affiliated with the A. F. of L.

The resolution charged that "the tendency to vigilantism is more subversive of good citizenship than the alleged ills at which it is aimed" and stated that participation of the Legion in labor controversies would tarnish its good name and make it "a party to mob rule and violence."

The motion of the Victory Post was passed is protest against action of the American Legion Department of the District in authorizing organization of a corps of Legion vigilantes in the city.

Victory Post declared it would refuse "to answer any call to mobilize against our buddies and fellow citizens" and would "resist any such illegal use of the Legion uniform, cap and insignia and any desecration of the American flag by carrying it into labor disputes."

Red Cross Calls Exceed a Million

Coincident with the twenty-fifth anniversary of establishment of its public health nursing service, the annual report of the American Red Cross, released yesterday, revealed that the organization's nurses made 1,035,764 visits in the year ending June 30.

"Never before in the peacetime history of the Red Cross have so many demands been made for its services," James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations, said in commenting on the report. "More than 3,600 of these nurses were called into action by the Ohio-Mississippi Valley floods alone."

Other phases of Red Cross activity included in the report are aid to veterans and their families, courses in home hygiene completed by 54,830 persons and courses in nutrition conducted through Red Cross chapters.

Historic Confederate Paper Believed Unearthed Here

Book Collector Satisfied He Has Acquired Galley Proofs of Alexander Stephen's Draft of Southern Constitution.

What he believes to be an authentic galley proof of the original Confederate Constitution was brought to light here yesterday by Nathan N. Wallack, book collector and proprietor of the Star Liquor Store, 513 Eleventh street northwest.

The old document, in a perfect state of preservation, bears corrections in the handwriting of Alexander H. Stephens, author of the historic constitution, Wallack said.

He obtained the multipage proof from a local collector for an undisclosed price. If authentic—and Wallack insists it is—the document is valued at several thousand dollars.

"I am certain it is a galley proof of the original Confederate Constitution," Wallack said. "I have taken it to the Library of Congress and find that notations that appear on the borders are in the handwriting of Stephens. The man from whom I purchased it was not aware of its value.

"I have made a study of historical documents," Wallack added, "and I feel this is the real thing. I dare say few people know of its existence."

The Confederate Constitution was written by Stephens in February, 1861 and was a factor in the War Between the States. It was drawn by Stephens in five days in Montgomery, Ala.

Wallack said he would sell the document at a reasonable price to anyone who would agree to donate it to the archives of the State of Georgia—"where it belongs."

Wilson and Ramey Get Y.M.C.A. Posts

Paul R. Wilson and Kenneth Ramey have been appointed to the staff of the department of physical education of the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest, Ralph W. Foster, director of physical education, announced yesterday.

Wilson was named senior aquatic director, succeeding J. Dallas Shirley, who resigned to become athletic director at the Alice Deal Junior High School.

Ramey was appointed junior aquatic director, succeeding William E. Hutzell, who has been named associate physical director in the senior physical department. Hutzell succeeds B. E. Phillips, who resigned to join the George Washington faculty.

Mussolini's Son Sails; Plans to Return Soon

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Vittorio Mussolini, eldest son of the Italian premier, sailed for home today, after a visit of 23 days in America. He said he planned to return soon. Young Mussolini, who came here to study motion picture methods in Hollywood, again denied his father had called him home.

Yellowstone Visits Reach New Record

A new attendance record at Yellowstone National Park was set during the summer, as 499,242 visitors and 123,413 motor vehicles were recorded by park officials, the National Park Service announced yesterday.

Visitors arriving by train, automobile and motorcycle, increased over last year.

Canada sent more visitors to the park by automobile than any country outside the United States. Hawaii was second, followed by the Canal Zone and the Philippine Islands. Canada, England, Australia and China led in rail travel.

3 More Plays Set Tomorrow In Tournament

F. B. I., Langley Lambs and Roosevelt Group Will Offer Dramas.

Second week of the annual One-Act Play Tournament of the District will get under way tomorrow night at Roosevelt High School with the presentation of three plays by the Federal Bureau of Investigation Theater Group, the Langley Lambs Club and the Roosevelt Drama Group.

The plays will be judged by Richard Westwood, Caleb O'Conner and John Hoffman, preliminary judges, and will compete with another group of three plays to be presented Thursday night for entry in the finals, to be held in the Roosevelt School auditorium on Saturday night.

Thursday night's programs will be presented by the Arts Club, American Association of University Women Play Guild and the Wesley Heights Players. Four best plays of the two groups will then be presented on Saturday before the five newspaper dramatic critics, Jay Carmody, Katharine Hillyer, Mabelle Jennings, Andrew R. Kelly and Nelson B. Bell.

"Free Wheeling" will be the title of the Roosevelt Drama Group's offering, and "The Hundredth Trick" will be given by the F. B. I. Players. The Langley Club will offer "The Old Trouper." Thursday night's program will include "Shanghai," by the Arts Club; "Soldadero," by the University Women's drama group, and "The Bride," by the Wesley Heights Group.

Annual tournament dinner of the contests will be held Sunday night at Wesley Hall. All participants, judges, directors and the public have been invited to make reservations for the gala dinner which marks the climax of the yearly tournament.

Donation Tea Set For Baptist Home

Plans for an annual donation day tea next Saturday afternoon were announced by the board of managers of the Baptist Home for Children, located on Cedar lane, Bethesda, Md.

Contributions will be received for support of the home. In addition to gifts of money, offers of clothing, school supplies, canned goods and other foodstuffs are expected.

Officers of the board to act as receptionists include Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, First Baptist Church, president; Mrs. H. T. Townsend, Kendall Baptist, first vice president; Mrs. Clayton Marsh, Brookland, second vice president; Miss Elizabeth Clark, First Church, recording secertary; Mrs. L. Donald Myers, Petworth, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Milton H. Prosperi, Metropolitan, treasurer.

Mrs. Lemuel H. Windsor, Fifth Church, is general chairman for the donation day tea. Sub-chairmen are Mrs. Hampden Wilson, National Baptist Memorial, clothing and supplies; Mrs. James R. Hardesty, Calvary, decorations; Mrs. Frank A. Martie, Kendall, cake; Mrs. Daniel C. Shankle, Metropolitan, candy and publicity; Mrs. Perry Stephenson, Bethany, cashier; Mrs. Clinton James, Fifth Church, cash donations; Mrs. Horace Wood, Petworth, will be in charge of the tea table. Arrangements have been made for autos to meet buses at Cedar Lane to convey guests to the home.

Twins, Both Laborers, Trade Wives Amiably

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 17 (AP).—Willard and John Nichols, twins, completed an amiable exchange of wives today. Willard was married at the sheriff's office to Eleanor, divorced last Thursday, by Brother John.

Immediately after obtaining his decree, John had driven to Hamilton, Mont., to be married to Mary, Brother Willard's former wife, by a justice of the peace.

Dr. Moore's Retirement.

During the 22 years in which Dr. Charles Moore has served as chairman of the National Commission of Fine Arts Washington has become almost a new city. The unsightly evidence of its sudden growth during the World War has been gradually eliminated. Notable progress has been made toward carrying out the restored L'Enfant plan. Washington has emerged from the category of neglected capitals to a city of considerable dignity and charm, with still greater promise of future development.

The name of Dr. Moore is quite properly linked with this achievement. Many years before he became associated with the Fine Arts Commission he interested himself in Washington's problems of city planning. As he now retires from the commission's chairmanship to a less active role, due apparently to his advanced age, he is entitled to a vote of thanks from the country as well as the residents of Washington.

Under Dr. Moore's guidance the Fine Arts Commission has completed a pioneer period. No one acquainted with its work will doubt that it has proved its worth. The chief problem at present seems to be general application of the artistic advice which this body is in a position to render. That calls for an energetic policy on the part of the commission. Perhaps the need of developing such a policy is one reason why Dr. Moore has requested that leadership be transferred to a younger man.

Congress ignored both the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission when it authorized construction of an elaborate memorial to Thomas Jefferson. The distressing results of that oversight are well known. The threat that one of Washington's most charming areas would be mutilated to make way for a mausoleum-like structure has sharply emphasized the desirability of extending the influence of those agencies responsible for the orderly and harmonious growth of the city.

Dr. Moore's successor, Gilmore D. Clarke, also has a record of achievements to his credit. If he is ready to pursue a fearless and vigorous policy, he has an opportunity to render service of inestimable value.

Mobilization For Human Needs.

Tonight the President will speak over three national radio networks, addressing himself to the nearly 50,000,000 persons who regularly contribute toward the support of health and welfare agencies. His words will launch the 1937 Community Mobilization for Human Needs. They will provide an inspiration for Community Chest drives in 398 cities throughout the country. Washington's drive will not begin, however, until November 8.

In this appeal the President will serve as spokesman for the humanitarian spirit in America. And his thoughtfulness will be widely applauded. For the need of human welfare work through private agencies is everywhere evident to those who will look. Despite the vast outpourings of Federal emergency funds, many still lack the barest necessities of life. Such fundamentals as food, clothing and shelter are needed. Almost equally important in the long run, many boys and girls are crying for social adjustment that only institutions supported by Community Chests can give them.

Washington provides an excellent example. It has recently been made clear that some 5,000 school children here lack adequate nourishment. Public spirited citizens are raising money to provide them with free lunches. But the lunch fund will not solve the basic problem. Each of the 5,000 children represents a home operating on a mere subsistence basis; for each child in school, there is probably at least one other at home similarly underfed, to say nothing of parents.

It is conditions of this sort that the President will doubtless have in mind tonight. It is conditions of this sort that Washington will be asked to alleviate through well organized community efforts.

"Balanced Abundance."

Dr. Glenn Frank pointed out in his address before the Washington Board of Trade that the "abundant life" can be achieved only by the production of more goods at lower prices, rather than fewer goods at higher prices. From the long-range viewpoint this is sound theory. It is also a good rule of conduct for individual producers to follow, provided they are functioning within a well-balanced economic system. But a generalization of this sort obviously does not afford a solution of problems created by temporarily large surpluses and low prices of certain commodities, coinciding with deficient supplies and high prices in other cases.

The American people are not being asked to choose between abundance and scarcity or between high and low prices. Our problem is how best to effect such adjustments as will, in the words of President Roosevelt, "produce a balanced abundance without waste." It is not the goal itself but the methods employed to reach it that give rise to disputes between advocates of planned economy and believers in unregulated private enterprise.

The President, for instance, made a significant reference in his recent radio address to his search for "governmental rules of the game" that would assure the balanced abundance he desires. This implicit confidence in the ability of the Government to direct economic processes is one of the most vulnerable features of the New Deal.

Output is constantly restricted under the most freely functioning system of competitive industry. Land, labor and capital are shifted from production of goods already abundant to more profitable uses. This kind of restriction operates in the public interest when it results in better balanced production. There is today, however, a wide area within which prices are not competitively determined—hence production is not competitively controlled.

In fact, the extent of such price fixing strongly suggests that unregulated competition is not always the best method of effecting needed economic adjustments. Certainly it would be a mistake to overestimate the advantages of competition, just as it would be to underrate the difficulties and dangers of artificial checks on production and prices.

Catchword phrases such as the "economy of scarcity" should be abandoned in favor of a more discriminating appraisal of restriction programs. During the years of deepest depression when unsalable surpluses were demoralizing the market planned economy began to be identified in the public mind with a regime of scarcity. And this impression was confirmed by the policies pursued under the AAA and the NRA. However, not even the most ardent believers in production control would advocate universal curtailment of output in industry and agriculture as a permanent policy. They regard such control as a localized remedy, to be applied with the help of the Government to bring about a better balance in the economic system.

Each proposal to regulate production, therefore, should be considered on its merits and not judged with reference to some dogmatic formula for testing its rightness. We should not uncompromisingly reject specific plans for control of output on the assumption that they mean a decrease in total wealth. What we should ask before passing judgment is whether such plans are administratively feasible. And if so, whether they provide a more economical way of attaining a balanced abundance than the unregulated competition of the market. Sometimes the answer will be "yes"; sometimes, "no."

Unable Or Unwilling?

In response to the question "Do you think this Administration will be able to balance the national budget during the next year?" the Institute of Public Opinion received negative replies from 94 per cent of the Republicans voting and from 76 per cent of the Democrats.

Despite the form in which the question was presented, it is obvious that only a handful of those polled could be expected to have enough information on budgetary problems to express an independent opinion. The great majority of those replying, therefore, were probably skeptical of any real achievement in this field because repeated assurances of a balanced budget "next year" have failed to materialize.

This reaction from a broad cross-section of public opinion strongly indicates that Presidential promises of putting an end to deficits have lost their power to allay concern over the unbalanced state of the budget. With the popular demand for such a balance growing as an understanding of its importance becomes more widespread, the Institute poll is a reminder that the time has come to act instead of merely continuing to talk.

The Brussels Parley.

Secretary Hull's choice of Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large, as United States delegate to the Brussels conference of Nine-Power Treaty signatories and of Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck and J. Pierrepont Moffatt as advisers to Mr. Davis, is an indication of the leading role which the United States is destined to play at that parley.

Mr. Davis is one of our most experienced diplomats and is a veteran of many great international conferences. Dr. Hornbeck, adviser to the Secretary on political questions of the Far East, and Mr. Moffatt, chief of the European division of the State Department, are outstanding authorities on Asia and Europe respectively. It is safe to say that no other delegation is likely to surpass that of the United States in technical ability and in understanding of the problems involved.

This is as it should be. The Administration has shown conclusively that it takes seriously the obligations and responsibilities which the United States assumed as the promoter of the Washington conference of 1921-22 and as a signatory of the Nine-Power Treaty. This Nation has no intention of letting that solemn covenant for the maintenance of the open door in China and of China's territorial and administrative integrity go by default. And to no small extent it is the stand which the United States has taken regarding the present crisis in the Far East that made possible the summoning of the Brussels parley.

Precisely what this conference will lead to is, of course, unclear. That will depend on circumstances as yet unrevealed. But there can be no quarreling with the intent, indicated in a statement by President Roosevelt, first of all to explore the possibilities of mediation between China and Japan, as a way of ending the ruinous struggle now raging in Eastern Asia. This will prove no easy task. But it is one which cannot be passed over. Certainly an opportunity must be given Japan to abandon the ruinous course upon which it has embarked and which has met with the condemnation of the rest of the world.

Should such mediatory efforts fail, there will be time enough to consider other measures. But the best interests both of Japan and of China would clearly be served by accepting Belgium's invitation to participate in the Brussels parley. If they will cooperate with the other signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, there will be an excellent chance of restoring peace in the Far East while safeguarding the interests of both sides.

Vigilance Against Shysters.

Co-operation between the Police Court and the District Bar Association to terminate unethical practices in that tribunal will meet with the hearty approval of the community. Fortunately the abuses uncovered by the bar committee do not appear to be widespread. But that may be a result of past vigilance. Certainly it would be no excuse for laxity in dealing with any present outcropping of shyster practices.

The high standards of conduct demanded of an attorney grow out of the vital relationship of the legal profession to the administration of justice. So it is a proper responsibility for the Bar Association to undertake to purge its own membership wherever unethical practices are discovered. Other groups, whether or not in the professional class, might well cultivate the fine sense of public responsibility which prompts organized lawyers to oust from their midst unscrupulous practitioners who take unfair advantage of the public.

In all such cases, of course, the lawyers are protecting their own interests as well as those of laymen. If an irresponsible few were allowed to indulge with impunity in ambulance chasing, "capping," misrepresentation and other irregularities, the entire profession would soon suffer. In the present instance, failure to correct abuses would certainly strengthen the case for a public defender to whom all citizens in difficulty could go for advice and legal representation.

Fortunately, however, the District Bar has frequently proved its alertness to unethical practices. Regardless of what may be the outcome of the present inquiry, there is satisfaction in knowing that a vigilant watch is being kept upon questionable practices in the legal profession.

"Before we can decide where we can go from here, we must determine just where we are," says Senator La Follette. Sounds reasonable. If we don't know where we are, we may at present be where we think we want to go.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

"Fountain Spouts On."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is my first letter to an editor of a newspaper. But your editorial in The Post of October 14 entitled "The Call For Congress" hit the nail on the head. It made me feel anxious to extend to you my congratulations for an excellently prepared editorial.

It is indeed regrettable that a class of people who have contributed so much to the material advancement of their country should be so unjustly excoriated by the "fountainhead of wisdom." There is a selfish purpose for these insidious attacks, but I had hoped when a member from "the fountainhead of wisdom" had united in holy wedlock with one of the chief so-called "enemies of democracy" that this cheap antagonistic policy would be discontinued. But the fountain spouts on.

The papers the country over should defend these so-called "enemies of democracy," as anything they say on their own behalf may be twisted around and used against them to build more class hatred. Your editorial in this respect should be gratifying to lots of people.

Luray, Va., Oct. 14.

A Co-operationist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Gallup indicates the majority of the citizens of the United States favor an "isolation policy" over one of co-operation with other nations. I am a co-operationist. We have the example of China, a nation for ages isolated from the rest of the world, now the prey of a much smaller and more aggressive nation, Japan.

What would be the situation if each of the 48 States of the Union were isolated from the other 47 States? Co-operation between States has made this Nation strong and progressive and peaceful one with the other. We are not constantly at war with our neighbors. Co-operation of all nations would be a blessing to the world.

THOMAS R. MECHEM.
Arlington, Va., Oct. 13.

Free School Lunches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily agree with your editorial of October 8 regarding free school lunches. There is certainly no good reason, as you say, for discrimination in favor of the child who goes to school, as contrasted with those not old enough to get a free lunch and education together.

It is hard to save children obtaining free lunches at school from any embarrassment. Therefore, the most reasonable and humane way of solving this problem is to attack it at its source, as you say. And to this effect I would suggest that the money collected for free lunches be distributed directly among the 5,000 parents of those malnourished children to supplement their meager earnings until an adequate wage is paid to all workers.

MRS. O. L. SCHWARZ.

Three In A Bed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see that Harlan Miller throws Justice Black, Tommy Corcoran, Ben Cohen and the Attorney General into the same category as lawyers. Do you think this is fair to Tommy and Ben? LAWYER.

The Struggle In Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not surprised that your readers are protesting against your editorial featured on the first page of your issue of October 6. The editorial itself was not only startling through its failure to give the true facts, but the address of the President upon which the editorial was based was more alarming. As I said in a previous letter to The Post, it is high time the American newspapers gave the American people the true facts.

The present situation in Spain and in China has been developing for a long time and is simply a culmination of the fight between communism and fascism to gain control of the governments of all of the countries of the world. As the President stated, but not with this explanatory note, "it can only be a matter of time before this country will be engulfed by the spread of the present reign of terror and international lawlessness."

The people of the United States do not want either communism or fascism in this country. Further, the real American can see no reason why this Nation should become involved in the dispute between these two radical forms of government in other lands, when the same threat prevails right now within our own borders and any action that we may take in the war either in the Far East or in Spain will light the spark that the radicals have been waiting for in our own country to start similar horrors here. It is high time that the United States Government stop its fool-hardy policy of ignoring "the prairie fire of lawless aggression," which Mr. Roosevelt mentioned, that has been kindled right within our own land, and use all of the forces of government to set our own house in order before meddling in the battle between communism and fascism in other lands.

The situation should be clearly understood by every local American and should be reiterated constantly by our American newspapers so that there can be no possibility of misunderstanding. The lines are very clearly drawn both in Spain and in China. On the one side in Spain we have Franco representing fascism, supported by Germany and Italy. In this connection we must not forget the challenge of Mussolini issued within the last few days that fascism will eventually sweep the world. On the other side, we have the Communists representing the present government in Spain, supported by Russia, and not overlooking the Communist leanings in France.

In the Far East we have practically a duplicate with the Communist forces in China, backed by Russia, in opposition to the Fascist forces of Japan supported by their allies. Why should we take sides in this controversy which without question will start the "prairie fires" of revolution going full force in our own land, with all of the attendant horrors of bloodshed and loss of life, property, and thus meekly fall in with the cleverly laid plans of Moscow? In this connection it would be wise once again to remind the people that fascism has only been adopted in other lands as an alternative or a preventive for communism. But we must not fail to remember at the same time that a skunk by any other name has the same odor.

Certainly to term the government in any country where either exists as a "democracy" is so absurd as to reflect on the intelligence of thinking people.

J. A. HALL,
President National Americanism Foundation.
Washington, Oct. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The perfect shower of letters in The Post of October 15, adversely criticizing your editorial "America Finds Her Voice," should show thoughtful readers of the daily press that "religion" cannot be ignored when we seek to understand national and international disturbances.

The letters above referred to assume, and are of one mind (two of them use exact words, though signed by different names), that the only government in Spain which our country recognizes is anti-Christian and practically atheistic, while the rebels are fighting for true religion and the church. They assume that Spain under a Bourbon king had "religious liberty"; that the church's ownership of lands and municipal bonds to the point of being a powerful capitalist was just and proper; that a religion which was strictly "state and church" was ideal. These letters assume that the nebulous term "communism" is a synonym for everything which is anti-Christian, and that Russia today stands for blood-red anarchy.

On the other hand, these writers fail to see that fascism is the deadly and avowed enemy of democracy. They ignore the obvious fact that Russia is not only aligning itself more each day with the great democracies, but is fast discovering that its people were not at war with religion, but with a type of it which became intolerable. So-called "communism" has existed in the world, in some form or other, from the time of the apostolic church, when "men had all things in common." It appears in the cry, "share the wealth," which is heard in our own country. In its violent forms, it becomes practical anarchy; in its common forms, it is but the cry of the underprivileged for more privilege.

But fascism is despotism, which places all power in the hands of a Mussolini, a Hitler or a Mikado. Atheism, on the other hand, is not a thing of terms merely; Napoleon was as much of an atheist as is Mussolini, though they both had no fight with religion except where it sought to obstruct their plans. Certainly our friends who complain that The Post is upholding the loyalists of Spain cannot seriously consider themselves friends of religion by upholding Mussolini and Hitler! I glad! admit what each of these men has done of good for their respective countries. But I also rejoice in what the present republic of Spain has done to redeem Spain from intolerance and ignorance.

Let us hope that "gone with the wind" will be appropriately said of an exploited peasantry, not only in Spain, but wherever such evils prevail. Meantime, all hail to a sane and genuine democracy!

J. O. KNOTT,
Washington, Oct. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the past hundreds of years there was no real religious liberty in the church-state government of Spain. The state paid millions annually directly out of the treasury to support that one church. Result: Other churches languished except the one church faith. Widespread poverty and superstition held sway all that time.

The Spanish loyalist government separated the church and state, just as we did in this country in the beginning. That is the real cause for the hatred expressed against the Spanish loyalist government.

The democratic Spanish republic is backed by Left Republicans, Basque Nationalists and Catalonian provincials as well as by Socialists and Communists. The Anarchists, excepting those in the Basque province, have repeatedly attempted to revolt against the loyalist government. Left (liberal) Republicans and Socialists are the two strongest parties of the Spanish coalition government. Both oppose dictatorship.

The Communists are not numerically strong enough in Spain to establish a dictatorship if the Spanish loyalists win, and Americans should be well enough posted to realize that Gen. Franco is already on record in word and deed that he will install a cruel dictatorship with ruthless extermination of liberals and radicals, because that is what he has done in rebel-held territory. If a majority backs him, why the necessity for mass murder?

The reason that he is smiling is because of the way some foreigners in other nations swallow the bunk he hands out. But how about the slain thousands of innocent women and children, caused purposely by rebel airplanes in Guernica, Madrid, Bilbao, etc.? Many of these were faithful Catholics.

The Post Impressionist

Monuments.

WASHINGTON is pretty prevalently monumental and many of its statues probably would look different if designed by Rodin.

Quite a few distinguished visitors have found fun in Washington's statues. Other visitors, literate after their fashion, have funned Washington's statutes apparently on the assumption that they, the other visitors, would become distinguished in the process. The logic of this thought-pattern is familiar: a movie is bound to be a moneymaker because it includes one or more scenes in which a hero socks a heroine on the chin; a man is sure to be outstanding because he swims the Hellespont, like Hero; laments at St. Helena, like Napoleon, or takes a trip down the Hudson, like Benedict Arnold. Only mostly it doesn't operate.

William Makepeace Thackeray, who developed a front, features and trimmings included, that rivals that of almost any patented portrait adorning the packaged perunas of the late nineteenth century, was present at some ceremony held at the Jackson statue in Lafayette Square, years ago. Maybe it was the dedication. Later he recorded that the statue was rather too ridiculous for words—at least for any words except those in which he set down his own impresison of it for his insular, and maybe insulated, readers in the British Isles. As far as he was concerned, Gen. Jackson on his prancing horse was just another of those monumental errors expected of the unartful republic of the west.

Probably he wasn't right about it. Most people who got into print weren't, according to latest advices, when they discoursed on Jackson, in whatever form or aspect. But a lot of articulate persons have agreed with Thackeray, nevertheless.

One of the faults in the statue noted by the great novelist was that the general's posture violated all the laws of equitation and maybe the law of gravity, and the same thing has been said by critics who have followed. But it is a fact recounted by the sculptor, and essentially obvious in the statue itself, that the image represents Jackson reining in his mount, bracing himself in the stirrups, and acknowledging a salute at one of several recurrent instants during his final tour of the defenses before the assault of Pakenham at New Orleans.

Once you get the drift of it you are able to judge the statue better. You can see it more clearly. Maybe you can see Jackson, even, clearly enough to conclude that the sculptor made a pretty passable portrait of him, and that the conception is spirited, as any conception of the general should be.

* * *

If you remember that the sculptor, Clark Mills, had never seen an equestrian statue before he made this one, and that he was on his way to Europe to study his art when the commisison for the Jackson statue was handed to him, you see more in the piece than you did before. It is a good engineering job—good enough, perhaps, to have evoked the approval of the artist-engineer Leonardo da Vinci.

Before Mills ventured to shape his horse in heroic size he made an intensive study, from living models, of well-put-up horses in action. His final miniature model was so finely designed that it balanced itself, with or without its rider, on its two hind hoofs. And before he started to shape the horse in such a difficult posture at all, of course, he knew precisely the reason of it. He was dealing with an animal under a man who was known to have been almost monumentally impulsive.

When Jackson said "scat!" he meant "scat" and no fooling, even when the cat was spelled C-a-b-i-n-e-t, and there was no time, as in the mountaineer story, to make holes to match the members at the bottom edge of the door. Mr. Jackson resigned from the Senate because he thought his continued presence there might involve a suspicion that he was using his position to advance his cause in the coming Presidential campaign; and when his opponents in bad faith resorted to reflections on his personal life, and Rachel Jackson brooded over her pipe about it and finally died of it, he looked them up in person and traded shots with them at ten paces, and one or two of them died of that.

He favored throwing his lead hot, concentrated, and direct, instead of mixing it up in typemetal and scattering it by proxy, as one might say. So it is likely he would have reined in a horse just about as abruptly as Mr. Mills thought. He was a sudden man.

* * *

When Mills couldn't find a foundry equipped to handle the casting, he built one for the job, out Northeast, and took care of it himself. Later he made replicas by request for New Orleans and Nashville. He said the last was the best of the lot.

The Jackson statue may not be great in the imaginative sense, but it is sound portraiture and is the work of a craftsman and engineer.

That reminds me that the statue of Gen. Grant standing west of the Capitol is probably the best piece of portrait sculpture in the District. There was a time when I paid little heed to it: I was distracted by the cavalry and artillery groups to either side. Then a friend of mine, who is an artist and engineer, insisted that I take notice, and I made a trip out with him to check up.

After looking it over I had to admit that the grim, battle-burdened figure, hunched deeply — maybe against a storm of advice—in his military cloak, had weight and character of the most downright kind. I shouldn't wonder but what Rodin would have found it impressive.

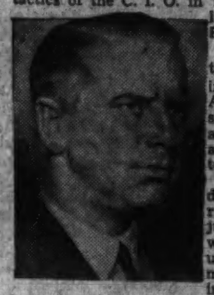
C. I. O. On Vigilantes.



SPEAKING OF the growth of the vigilante movement which the C. I. O. has viewed with alarm in its convention in Atlantic City, what would you call the tactics of the C. I. O. in Youngstown and Bethlehem last June and in Hazelton, Pa., in August?

Notwithstanding attempts to terrorize them into joining the C. I. O., numbers of American workmen in the steel plants of Youngstown and Bethlehem held aloof and insisted on their right to keep their jobs.

Nobody had the gall to deny that this was their right, but the C. I. O. was just going to trample it, anyway. But the pickets were unable to intimidate the men, so threats were made in each case that a larger force of outsiders would be marched in to reinforce those who were on strike outside the gates.

These mobile forces were not mere orators or silent marchers who would appeal to reason. They would come into close the plants by the same sort of force that is so solemnly deplored as criminal when it is used against strikers. And it is criminal, no question, whether in a massacre of strikers in Chicago or in a somewhat more bloody and, if anything, more savage massacre of workmen in Herrin, Ill.

HAVING FAILED to organize enough of the Youngstown and Bethlehem steel workers to close the plants, the C. I. O. then let it be understood that terrific violence, bloodshed and butchery would occur if troops were not sent in to close them.

The non-strikers had a right to protection from their Government in this emergency, but the C. I. O. demanded instead that the troops be used to enforce the unlawful will of a private and unofficial super-government. It was as though a yegg intent on robbing a bank had sent a wire to the Governor saying, "Unless you send cops to get the employes out of the bank there will be terrific violence, bloodshed and butchery."

The case was even more flagrant in Hazleton, where a committee of workers of the Suplan Silk Corporation signed a petition declaring that they rejected the C. I. O. as their bargaining agent and wanted to go back to work were answered by a proclamation from Hugh V. Brown, president of District Seven of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, declaring the petition to be "one of the lowest and filthiest insults that could be handed to the United Mine Workers and organized labor in general and one that will not go unchallenged."

For vigilantism Mr. Brown's proclamation is a museum piece. "Let it be known," it said, "by each and every signer of the petition that the United Mine Workers in this region will not permit faithful workers, independent organizations or communism to enter Hazleton or any territory within the confines of District Seven."

• • • •

THE REFERENCE to communism appears to have been lagniappe, for certainly it is not characteristic of the Communists to proclaim a desire to return to work and there is nothing anywhere in the correspondence which suggests that communism was involved.

"Any member of the United Mine Workers who has a wife, daughter, brother or son who is a signer of this petition should and will pay strict attention to this statement," Mr. Brown's proclamation continues, "for on it depends his membership in the United Mine Workers. This organization will not permit any of its members to continue to hold membership who allows any member of his family to scab in an open shop such as the Suplan Silk Mills. Let every mine worker beware, for he will not be allowed to enter any mine or colliery if he permits any member of his family to return to the Suplan Silk Mills unless signed by a legitimate labor organization.

Thus, the C. I. O. mine workers would have arbitrarily extended their authority to control workmen who had rejected the C. I. O. on a theory that anyone who joined the mine workers joined for his whole family.

That wages, hours and conditions were bad in the silk mill, as they are in most silk mills, would be beside the point. One group of workers had to submit to the will of another group in another industry or take serious consequences.

It is easy to agree with the C. I. O. that the vigilante movement is a dangerous development. Feeling so, the C. I. O. might take the initiative.

R. L. Stevenson

By William Lyon Phelps

An Appreciation.

In general, I am well satisfied with the date of my birth; the 50 years I lived before the World War were good times.

But in one respect I was born too soon. I was 21 when I read my first book by Robert Louis Stevenson. All the people born after 1880 had one tremendous advantage over me: in their childhood and youth they read wildly exciting stories of blood and thunder, written in beautiful prose by a great artist.

• • • •

But the next generation had the same excitement along with beauty and dignity of expression. "Treasure Island" is a wild yarn of wild pirates, and the author was as careful of his style as if he had been Henry James, Hawthorne or Flaubert.

Well, now, to all lovers of Stevenson I recommend a new appraisal of his genius by one who understands him. This book is called "Presbyterian Pirate: A Portrait of Stevenson," is written by Doris N. Dalglish and is published by the Oxford University Press, New York.

• • • •

The only trace of Puritanism left in many persons today is the belief that a book cannot really be good art if it is a delight to read it. Stevenson has been treated by many with condescension. It is therefore refreshing to find this acute Scottish critic calling Stevenson "the greatest man of letters" Scotland has ever produced. I remember, when I wrote and printed years ago the statement that Stevenson was a greater writer than Scott, how severely I was rebuked in an English review.

We think of Stevenson as a "recent" writer; in 13 years the world will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.

"Whiffle-Tree" or Not?

When is a whiffle-tree not a whiffle-tree? The answer seems to be when you see it in the dictionary where the weight of authority is tipped in favor of "whipple-tree." If Mr. Webster is right, then every farmer in the United States is wrong and the whipple-tree must be manufactured exclusively of apple wood.

The question arose the other night in a certain newspaper office in connection with the WPA circus strong man and the whiffle-trees attached to the four horses he was yanking around. Now editors, while not exactly slaves of the lamp, like Aladdin's genii, are hopeless slaves of the dictionary which is printed in America presumably for American usage. Oddly enough, it was England's Oxford dictionary which came to the rescue and resolved the predicament, for there under the head of "whipple-tree" was also offered: "Whiffle-tree, the invariable American variant of splinter-bar."

But there is classic English authority for whiffle-tree, too. Lewis Carroll declares flatly that "The Jabberwock, with eyes of flame, came whiffling through the tulgey wood." It is obvious that the Jabberwock was advancing through a grove of whiffle-trees.

Tokyo Letter

Correspondent Reports Japanese Marching to China With Enthusiasm of Crusaders; Japan Doubts U. S. Intervention.

By Fritz Ermarth.

Special Correspondent to The Post.

Tokyo.

THE STREETS of Tokyo still broil in midsummer heat, but in the nearby mountains the first signs of fall have appeared. The dark forests of Nikko that surround the ancient sacred shrines are in color, and snow has fallen on Mount Fuji. For mountains, trees and creeks in this unspeakably beautiful country, full of heroic as well as intimately delicate scenery, this is only another lovely September; but for the courageous and hospitable people who live on the islands called Nippon, it is full of extraordinary significance, and the foreign visitor is aware of it from the very first moment he enters the country.

To the American or the West European, Japan presents two faces. He is constantly reminded of a powerful dualism that marks the soul of modern Japan, a dualism that results from the mystical dreaming of an ancient people, timeless, ageless, and speechless, best represented perhaps in the wise and melancholy smile of the Buddah of Kamakura, and a rationalistic, activistic, super-American, in other words "Western" determination to do things, and to do them quickly and effectively.

It is the powerful combination of these two forces of the Japanese character that has set the nation on the march. "An Asiatic empire under the leadership of Japan" as an ally of Japan, the Mongol prince Teh recently formulated it. This is the goal toward which the nation is striving with unswerving energy, consciously in the small upper classes, highly skilled in the art of politics and leadership, and subconsciously in the minds of the masses accustomed to follow their lords for centuries with a happy indifference to their own sacrifices.

Change Into Industrial State Important Factor.

THE SOCIOLOGICAL background for Japanese expansion in Asia has often enough been described: overpopulation, with the birth rate still increasing, the lack of markets for industrial products, an unsolved agricultural problem, and a ruling group that is determined to maintain its superior position at any price.

A journey through the country amounts to a clear confirmation of the familiar textbook "factors." And yet, as important as all these economic factors may be, the sudden transformation of a feudal state into a highly industrialized one, the drive toward empire and the volcanic vehemence with which suddenly latent energies have been mobilized—all this cannot be explained simply in terms of statistics on the birth rate and on commerce.

Before our eyes one of the great dramas of history is unfolding. But strangely enough, the average American newspaper reader, although better informed about the actual happenings in world politics than the newspaper public in Europe and Asia (one most certainly gets a more complete picture of the Far Eastern situation in the United States than here), seems slow to grasp the depth and vigor of a movement such as the march of Nippon into Asia.

Political judgment depends fundamentally on a sense for proportion, and the proportions of the Far Eastern problem with regard to the United States are today changing with incredible swiftness. An expert on Far Eastern affairs, the former Italian finance minister and financial adviser to the Nanking government, De Stefani, announced recently in the Stampa that the end of European and American prestige in Asia was at hand. And it appears to be obvious that whatever the outcome of the present struggle may be, it has awakened a spirit that will not subside. Whether the end of European prestige in Asia is a foregone conclusion or not, one has no doubt that the present conflict is just a skirmish, an overture leading to far greater events.

The thousands of young men who, before their departure for China, ride every evening through the brightly illuminated streets of Japanese cities, singing and shouting "Banzai," and waving the flag of the rising sun, do not go just to "punish or admonish an ill-advised Chinese government," as the premier, Prince Konoe, and Mr. Hirota have stated; they go in much the same spirit in which the Italians went to Addis Ababa, the English to Africa and India, and the American pioneers to the West.

The financial situation of Japan is admittedly difficult. I was privileged recently to be present when the Diet passed the two-billion-yen extraordinary budget to finance the "China incident." The vote was achieved with perfect discipline and without a dissenting voice, yet I became convinced that in spite of the unanimity with which everything has been done, great concern and uneasiness is felt in financial circles, few seem to doubt that the war may drag on for a very long time. Nevertheless, as long as the Japanese armies are victorious, a nation united in an almost religious determination can accomplish miracles in the economic field.

Modern ways and means of drafting capital as well as labor for the purposes of war, mobilizing industries, perhaps nationalizing them outright, together with moderate inflation, can enable a nation that is spiritually united to fight for a very long time. I am told here that Japan, in recent years, has stored away enough war materials to last at least several years without any additional supplies of raw materials from abroad.

The present war is waged for the control of China, not only of North China but entire China. The rivals are, in the last analysis, not Tokyo and Nanking, but Tokyo and Moscow. That the present Chinese national government is now tending more and more to lean toward Moscow for support is but natural, although prior to the outbreak of the conflict Sino-Soviet relations were anything but happy due to a number of problems, especially the control of Mongolia. To what extent the Soviet Union will openly interfere in behalf of Nanking is a matter of great speculation here, the answer depending, of course, to a large extent on developments in Europe in the near future.

Everyone here seems to be convinced that the world is headed for conflicts of unforeseen dimensions and seems also to be stoically resigned to the fact. Whether or not the United States should and can stay out of the coming conflict is too big a problem to be debated in this article. But viewed from Asia, it seems highly improbable that the nations of the American continent, and especially the United States, can remain aloof from a conflict in either Asia or Europe into which Great Britain would eventually be drawn.

Tokyo Sees Possibility Of Intervention By British.

LET US ASSUME that Great Britain is drawn into a war against Italy, Germany and the smaller Fascist nations. Everyone admits that this is possible because of the Franco-Russian alliance and the Franco-British co-operation, on the one hand, and Hitler's eastern European and Mussolini's Mediterranean ambitions on the other. If Japan at the same time should be involved in a war against the Soviet Union (then, willy-nilly, England's friend), could the United States afford to see Great Britain defeated or seriously weakened in the Pacific?

Events indicate that Americans would do well to think more of these possibilities instead of pursuing an idealistic phantom of "neutrality." In all of this, time is, of course, an important factor, and it may be that the linking together of the "local" wars into one general war can be averted still for a number of years. These are stern and near realities, however, for the American people to face.

However cynical and blunt it may sound to sensitive ears, it is becoming increasingly important to recognize the fact that not the weakest nation will have the slightest respect for the desires and wishes of the United States unless it is convinced that she has ships and guns and is willing to use them on the proper occasion.

This willingness on the part of the people of the United States seems to be questioned in Japan, not so much because of the wise, prudent, and peaceful policy of moderation on the part of the American Government, but because of the many manifestations of a dangerous ultra-pacifism on the part of numerous and influential American organizations which are widely reported and discussed here in political circles. The consequences are becoming increasingly alarming.

The problem of the Far Eastern conflict merging with the European conflicts is one for the future. At present the world is faced with the fact of a unified nation striving to attain what she believes to be her rightful aims. That the Japanese people, in spite of great hardships, are determined to fight a long war if necessary, and they believe it to be just a war, is beyond doubt.

It is not incidental that the present Japanese cabinet, with Prince Konoe as premier and Hirota as foreign minister, is a moderate cabinet called into office by the Emperor contrary to the wishes of the extremists, after the uprising of young Fascist officers in February, 1935.

Arms Race

A

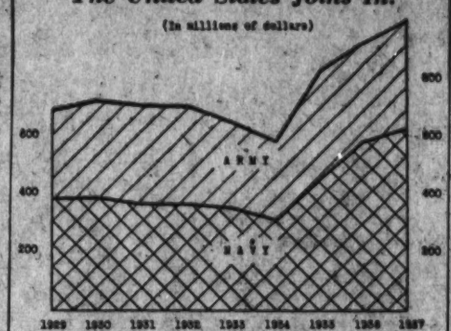
The United States Joins In.



IN A RECENT ADDRESS in Chicago President Roosevelt pointed out that some governments are spending as much as 30 to 50 per cent of their income directly for armaments, while "the proportion that we in the United States spend is far less—11 or 12 per cent." Our own expenditures for armaments have been rising absolutely, though not relatively, as is evident from the accompanying chart.

To obtain accurate data of what many of the great powers are spending for armament is impossible. The United States Government does not resort to such secrecy. The figures indicated in the chart are for fiscal years, with expenditures for nonmilitary activities of the War Department excluded. All figures through 1935 are from closed accounts; for the two later years they are partly estimated.

In the years immediately preceding 1934 military and naval expenditures in the United States were slowly declining. The United States Government was then exerting its influence in behalf of a limitation of armaments and was following a policy of "disarmament by example."

With the failure of the Disarmament Conference to achieve any substantial results the United States Government in 1934 decided to build its navy up to the full strength permitted by the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922. With the renunciation of that treaty by Japan, the American naval program was further enlarged, and, whether for good or ill, the United States was drawn into the race by world powers to re-arm against a possible war which none of them desired but all seemed to fear.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Inconvenience.

We wouldn't want to cramp your style the slightest—
The smallest inconvenience we'd correct;
We know how one's intentions, though the whitest,
By little inconveniences are checked;
We wouldn't want to do a thing that tended
To put you out, but still we feel you might Stop bombing people wholly undefended
And killing little children in the night.

II.

An interruption isn't very pleasant
When there's important killing to be done,
And to delay the bombing of a peasant
Slows up, perchance, some Oriental fun.
And when orders on a war are duly posted
We know that to be hampered isn't sweet,
But still we feel an hour isn't wasted
That doesn't pile the wounded in the street.

III.

To make your plans for Monday's wholesale slaughter
And be delayed to Tuesday hurts a lot;
An egemy, his mother and his daughter
Should be rubbed out on schedule time; why not?
We know that life is short and time is fleeting,
But still we have a feeling rather deep
It wouldn't mean your whole campaign's defeating
To spare the aged and helpless in their sleep.

IV.

To have your schedule set for some town's razing
And have to put it off a little while Might bring from other lands some words of praising,
But that is hardly in the modern style;
Efficiency in slaughter—that's the ticket,
And warriors must not be slowed a bit,
But still we do not think that it is cricket
To score on hospitals a perfect hit.

V.

An inconvenience is, of course, today most trying—
We're all in such a hurry, don't you know?
And even though the innocent are dying
It's tough to have to heed a sign "Go slow!"
An inconvenience hampers any Power,
But still we think it wouldn't hamper you much
If you were inconvenienced for the hour

After Columbus Day.

You found this land and said "It's great"
To Isabella and her kin;
What would you say, Columbus, now
If you could see the shape it's in?

Bathtubs to Bar China Plagues From America

Experts Hold Cleanliness Will Prevent Spread of Epidemics Here.

By the Associated Press.

Public Health Service experts say the United States is safe from an Asiatic-born typhus plague because Americans are "bathtub conscious."

Cleanliness of the body and pure water and food supplies were described by the experts yesterday as major safeguards against danger of epidemic diseases spreading from the Chinese war zone.

League of Nations medical experts have expressed alarm lest the Sino-Japanese war result in a break-down of China's quarantine service.

"We in this country feel we are not seriously menaced, regardless of what occurs in China," a Public Health Service spokesman said.

Quarantine Efficient.

"We do not believe any epidemic will occur because of the close co-operation between the quarantine service of the Public Health Service and internal health organizations. Even if cases should get beyond the first line, they would be promptly encompassed by the second line."

The Public Health Service lists yellow fever, cholera, smallpox, typhus fever, pneumonic plague (the black death) and leprosy, as quarantinable diseases. All but yellow fever and leprosy now are prevalent in China, officials said.

Officials said epidemic typhus is carried by body lice. They pointed out that there was no epidemic typhus on the western front during the World War because of stern "delousing" measures by both sides.

Endemic typhus, far less dangerous than epidemic typhus, appears occasionally in this country, but officials do not regard it as presenting a serious problem. This disease is carried by rats and other small animals.

Distance Is Barrier.

Cholera, officials said, is mostly water-borne. Water systems in this country provide adequate safeguards from this plague, they added.

A vigorous campaign against rats on ships in recent years has virtually eliminated danger of pneumonic plague. This disease has appeared only twice in this country—in Oakland and Los Angeles, Calif., in the early 1920's. Both epidemics were quickly stamped out.

Cholera, officials said, develops within five days—a factor which provides this country an effective safeguard, since the fastest trip from China—by air from Hongkong—requires six days, including stopovers. Persons suspected of being carriers of the disease are placed under observation upon arrival in Honolulu.

Palestine Issue Is Debated by NewYorkRabbi

Dr. Pool Discusses Both Angles in Partitioning Plan of Britain.

Dr. David de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Portuguese Synagogue of New York City, last night conducted before an audience of 300 at the Jewish Community Center what he described as "a debate with myself" on the British royal commission's recent recommendations for the partition of Palestine.

Dr. Pool, who has been a frequent visitor and student of conditions in Palestine since the Jewish national homeland was created after the war, was in Palestine when the royal commission's report appeared and later attended the Zionist Congress in Zurich.

He said all the delegates at the congress were agreed that the particular partition suggested by England should be rejected.

Dr. Pool charged that the present British mandate has not failed because it never has been given a fair trail. He asked whether it was possible to build a Zionist state in a territory where there are as many Arabs as Jews and whether the area of 2,000 square miles assigned to the Jews by the Royal Commission ever could be anything but a puppet state and international curiosity.

Then assuming the position of those who favor further negotiation with England, Dr. Pool declared that a bi-national state never could satisfy Jewish aspirations in Palestine. He added that the British Empire had determined to renounce responsibilities of administering the present mandate so that the only practical course was to bargain for the most favorable partition possible.

Heart Attack Kills Mrs. Marie Stone

Mrs. Marie E. Stone, 35, wife of Earnest R. Stone, died unexpectedly Saturday of heart attack while visiting the office of Dr. J. M. Bates. She had been in ill health for several years.

Seal Advocates Income Tax To Equalize Citizens' Burden

Corporation Counsel Warns Against Many Exemptions and Careless Definition of 'Resident' as Providing Loopholes.

This is the second of a series of articles by District officials on the local tax problem. The Post is conducting a referendum, inviting all residents of Washington to vote on whether they prefer a modified business privilege tax, an income tax, a sales tax or another increase in the real estate tax. Other articles will follow.

By ELWOOD H. SEAL,
District Corporation Counsel.

The levying of an income tax has been suggested as one of the few remaining methods of raising additional funds for the support of the District government.

Income tax has been defined as a tax on a person's income, emoluments, profits, salary and the like. Most, if not all, income-tax laws, however, require the payment of a tax upon the net rather than the gross income. In other words, the law generally allows for exemptions, deductions for dependents, losses, bad debts, taxes paid, depreciation and the like. This means that where the taxpayer's net return is small, his tax is correspondingly small. Most modern tax experts assert that income tax is the fairest method of raising funds for the upkeep of government, since it is based upon ability to pay.

When the United States Senate had before it for consideration the act now on the statute books and known as Public No. 314, Seventy-fifth Congress, the question of substituting an income tax for a sales tax was discussed. Many Senators were of the opinion that the levying of an income tax was the proper method of meeting the District's deficit for the current fiscal year. They insisted that those most able to pay should bear the burden. In fact, the Senate went so far as to offer and pass a title providing for an income tax for the District of Columbia. This bill did not win approval of the House managers, however, and therefore failed of enactment.

Levy Passed House in '31.

The 75th Congress was not the first Congress to consider raising taxes by levying an income tax for the District of Columbia. The question was debated in the 72nd Congress, first session. There a bill, H. R. 5821, was drawn and actually passed the House of Representatives on December 17, 1931. The bill then went to the Senate and was referred to the Senate District Committee. The Senate District Committee called upon the Bureau of Efficiency to report upon the measure. The Bureau of Efficiency in its report to the Senate stated the purpose of the bill was to substitute an income tax for the present intangible tax law. Of course everyone will agree that a tax on intangibles such as we have in the District of Columbia is inequitbale and vicious and should be corrected. In the report of the Bureau of Efficiency, dated May 10, 1932, the following language may be found:

"It is the opinion of this bureau that a decided improvement will be made in the District taxing system by the substitution of an income tax for the present tax on intangible property."

The above bill, H. R. 5821, 72nd Congress, was similar to other and more recent bills. Practically all of them, after imposing a tax on residents of the District of Columbia, provide inter alia as follows:

"A like tax is hereby imposed and shall be levied, collected, and paid annually at the rate specified in this section upon and with respect to the entire net income as herein defined, except as otherwise herein provided; from all property owned and from every business, trade, profession, or occupation carried on in the District of Columbia by persons not residents of the District."

"Resident" Is Loophole.

Since the imposition of an income tax is upon residents, it becomes necessary to define the word "resident." In the various drafts of bills before the 75th Congress the term "resident" was defined as any natural person who

(1) is either domiciled in the District of Columbia, or

(2) (One) who maintains a permanent place of abode within the District of Columbia and spends in the aggregate more than three months of the taxable year within the District of Columbia.

The bill drafted for the 75th Congress also provided that "when a person domiciled without the District of Columbia maintains a place of permanent abode within the District of Columbia, and spends more than three months of the taxable year within the District of Columbia, he is a resident for the entire period during which he maintains said permanent place of abode."

In order to tax the nonresident who carries on his business or profession or receives his salary or wages within the District, language similar to that used in H. R. 5821, 72nd Congress, was used.

With language such as appears above written in a law and with the peculiar status of both the District of Columbia and those who are employed within its borders, many complex questions arise.

For example: Who under this definition and language is required to pay the tax? Who is exempt? Will Senators and Representatives of the several States be required under the definition of resident to pay the tax? Or, if Senators and Representatives are not residents within the meaning of the act are they nonresidents carrying on their profession or business within the District of Columbia?

If it be held that Senators and Representatives are neither residents within the meaning of the term as defined nor nonresidents carrying on their profession or business here, then what is the status of a Senator or a Representative who maintains a permanent place of abode within the District of Columbia and spends in the aggregate more than three months of the taxable year in the District of Columbia?

What is the status of the Federal Government employe, working within the District of Columbia but living in an adjoining State? What is the status of the District employe working for the District government but living in an adjacent State? If the Federal Government employe living without the District is exempt for any reason, would it not be discrimination to require the District employe living without the District to pay the tax?

These are but few of the problems that arise. Another question that arises is whether the District of Columbia is a State? It is well settled that a State cannot tax a salary of a Federal employe. Neither can the United States tax the salary of a State employe. The Supreme Court of the United States in Collector vs. Day, 11 Well, 113, 124, said:

". . . And, as it was said in Texas vs. White, 7 Wall, 700, 725, and often has been repeated—"the preservation of the States and the maintenance of their governments are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National Government.' The unimpaired existence of both governments is equally essential. It is to that high end that this court has recognized the rule, which rests upon necessary implications, that neither may tax the governmental means and instrumentalities of the other."

State Status Questioned.

Now, if the District of Columbia be a sovereignty, occupying the status of a State of the Union, then taxes for the support of the District could not be imposed upon Federal employes, since the governmental functions of the United States Government would be burdened thereby.

The answer to this question, however, we believe may be found in Metropolitan R. R. Co. v. D. C., 132 U. S., page 1. In that case the Supreme Court said:

". . . the District shall 'remain and continue a municipal corporation,' with all rights of action and suits for and against it. If it were a department of the Government, how could it be sued? Can the Treasury Department be sued; or any other department? We are of opinion that the corporate capacity and corporate liabilities of the District of Columbia remain as before, and that its character as a mere municipal corporation has not been changed."

". . . It is undoubtedly true that the District of Columbia is a separate political community in a certain sense, and in that sense may be called a State; but the sovereign power of this qualified State is not lodged in the corporation of the District of Columbia, but in the Government of the United States."

There is another question that cannot be overlooked in this discussion. Can it be said that a Federal employe who is a nonresident of the District of Columbia, working for the Federal Government on property of the Federal Government, receive his salary within the District of Columbia? In other words, because of the ubiquity of the Federal Government, can it be said that such a nonresident receives his salary within the Distrtc of Columbia?

Exemptions Dangerous.

In order that an income tax law be successful in its operation and produce enough revenue, it should be drawn with a view of applying to as many persons as possible. If when drawn it is found that it does not apply to various classes of persons the burden will then have to be borne by a few and the law will be a failure. Then again, if, after enactment, the law should be held unconstitutional the District's financial status would be imperiled.

If Congress should see fit to enact an income tax law for the District, it will have to be careful, however, not to write into the law too many exemptions, if indeed there should be any at all. To exempt not only cuts down the revenue but renders the act more difficult of enforcement and opens it to all sorts of legal attacks.

There are those of us who believe that the time has now come when everyone should shoulder some share of the government's costs—be it ever so small.

Mrs. Talbott, D. A. R. Leader, Expires at 73

Wife of Oldest Rockville Lawyer Was Noted Genealogist.

Mrs. Bertha Hall Talbott, outstanding genealogical authority and a leader of the Daughters of the American Revolution, died yesterday at her home in Rockville, Md. She was 73 years old.

Mrs. Talbott was the wife of William H. Talbott, oldest living member of the Rockville bar. The former Bertha Hall, she was born in Poolesville, Md., a member of an old Montgomery County family. She lived for a time in Hagerstown, but had spent the last 30 years in Rockville.

Former vice president general of the D. A. R., Mrs. Talbott was once national chairman of the organization's Old Trails road committee. She was a founder and former secretary-treasurer of the National Officers and State Regents Club of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Talbott was also a member of the Colonial Dames of America and was for three years chairman of the Eastern Division of the Committee for the Preservation of Historic Spots. She was one of the five original members of the National Society of the Daughters of Barons of Runymede.

In addition, Mrs. Talbott was a founder of the Institute of American Genealogy and was a former regent and chaplain of the Col. Tench Tilthman Chapter of the D. A. R. of Rockville. She and her husband celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary last month.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a daughter, Mrs. Walter G. Ellison, of Waynesboro, Va.; a son, William Randolph Talbott, of Rockville, and two sisters, Mrs. A. P. Fletchall and Mrs. R. S. Owens, of Roanoke, Va.

Funeral services will be held at her home, 122 South Van Buren street, Rockville, at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Mrs. Lydia Loring, Ill for Year, Dies

Mrs. Lydia Latrobe Loring, wife of the late Dr. Francis B. Loring, died yesterday morning in her home at 1754 N street northwest. Mrs. Loring, who was 79, had been ill more than a year.

A daughter of one of Baltimore's most prominent families, Mrs. Loring came to Washington as a bride more than 50 years ago. Her husband was one of the founders of the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Loring was a member of St. John's Church, which was designed by her grandfather, Benjamin H. Latrobe, in 1816. Latrobe was one of the architects of the Capitol and a leading exponent of the Greek revival in American architecture.

Mrs. Loring's brother, Ferdinand C. Latrobe, was seven times mayor of Baltimore. She was a cousin of the late Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

She is survived by a daughter, Miss Lydia Latrobe Loring, with whom she made her home in Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted in the residence at 1 1a. m. tomorrow.

Rush-Hour Seats for All

Cannot Be Provided, But Riders Are Carried Cheaply and Safely

No big city street car and bus system can provide seats for all rush hour passengers. Many must ride standing. This is as true in Seattle and Detroit, where city governments run the lines, as in Washington and other cities where private citizens run them. It is true because no such system, private or municipal, is permitted to earn enough to buy and run cars and buses enough to give each rush hour rider a seat.

But all such systems do carry huge armies of customers to and from work, school or business, cheaply and with maximum safety. Our 1,000 cars and buses in daily use carry 126,000 riders between 6:45 and 9:45 a. m. every week day. The safest place in Washington traffic is inside a street car or a city bus. Average price of rides in our cars and buses—under six and one-half cents—is less than half the average in taxis and private cars.

Your Washington system is as good as fares fixed by law permit it to be. But it is not earning anything for its owners.

Dog Entries Pouring in For Old Dominion Show

Society Enthusiasm Gives Kennel Club's Fort Myer Exhibition Important Status Among Eastern Events.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Literally hundreds of entries are pouring in from everywhere to swell sizable quotas for the Old Dominion Kennel Club Show to be held at Fort Myer, October 29-30. One of the most recently established dog shows in the country, it is already assuming a large and important status among such shows in the East.

A great deal of its success leaps and bounds from the enthusiastic support that is being rendered it by society in these regions. You may never have realized it before but practically everybody is set on showing his or her dog. There will be at least 500 on display on the opening day in the big riding hall at Fort Myer.

Mrs. Wainwright, wife of Col. J. M. Wainwright who is commandant of the hilly Army post just across the Key Bridge in Virginia, will present rosettes to the parade of champions when the last whistle blows and the final bark is over. Mrs. "Chip" Roberts is on the program to present the best in show. Not only that, but Mrs. Roberts is showing a prize-contending schnauzer herself. The Wainwrights have already put their Labrador retriever down on the list.

Minister of Siam May Show Great Dane.

It is hoped that the Minister of Siam, Phya Rajamaitri, will be on hand with his towering Great Dane. At least he is still turning the matter over in his mind and will probably come to a decision the middle of the week when the first closing date is scheduled to roll around.

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean is expected to have her Apfen pinscher among the entries. Apfen pinscher is an extremely unusual breed. The Mark Payntons are presenting their shelties, also. Shelties—in case you are not up on your dog data—are miniature collies, but notwithstanding that, they always present a big bid for the limelight at such affairs.

Irish terriers are the specialty of Col. Armstead who will bring them to Fort Myer for the Old Dominion Kennel Club display. Arthur W. Scharfield will enter the field with a large contingent of wirehair terriers.

About 300 Prizes To Be Offered.

Altogether there will be about 300 prizes and Mrs. John G. Turnbull has the important and responsible task as chairman of the trophy committee, to see that the blue ribbons are in order. Next to Mrs. Turnbull, one of the hardest-working members of the Kennel Club is George Scaggs, who as chairman of the bench committee, is just about chairman of everything—plus all the last-minute details.

Last year there were about 500 entries, but from the looks of things now that number will be greatly increased this year. Even the riding hall may not be large enough to hold everything.

So, between the Fairfax Hunt, the Inter-American and the Old Dominion Kennel Club meet, events of sports interest seem to be taking the limelight even on the society page.

Masonic Party Set for Today

The fall card party for the benefit of the Infirmary of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, will be given today from 2 to 5 p. m. at the Williard Hotel, under the leadership of Mrs. Nora Riley, general chairman.

Mrs. William Herbst and Miss Mabel Boardman head the list of sponsors. Mrs. Paul Cromelin, wife of the grand master of Masons; Mrs. Julia Streator, president of the board of directors; Mrs. Elizabeth Rhine, worthy grand matron; Mrs. Edward Riley, Mrs. Leila Cooke, Mrs. Asa Burdine and Mrs. Helen Robbins are among those prominent in Eastern Star work who are sponsoring the benefit.

Other sponsors include Miss Ottie Nelson, Miss W. Hoeke, Mrs. Frank Hines, Mrs. William Loveless, Mrs. Edward Coffigan, Mrs. J. C. Tyles, Mrs. Milburn, Mrs. Nellie Fletcher, Mrs. Philip Affleck, Mrs. Frank Pierce, Mrs. George McCulloch, Mrs. David J. Cox, Mrs. Taylor Branson, Mrs. J. Ernst Smith, Mrs. Needham Turnage, Mrs. Louise Kreglow, Mrs. I. E. Shoemaker.

Portsmouth Girl Wed to Dr. Usow

Now on a wedding trip through northern New York State and Canada, Dr. and Mrs. John Maurice Usow, who were married at the Hotel Monticello, Norfolk, Va., on October 10, will make their home in Milwaukee, Wis.

Mrs. Usow was the former Miss Ella Mae Goodman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asral Harry Goodman, of Portsmouth, Va. Mr. Usow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Usow, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Guests from Washington who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Dave Baum, Miss Sarah Goodman, Mrs. Jacob Miller, Mrs. F. Snyder, Mrs. Jacob Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harris and Dr. and Mrs. Roscoe Aull.

Miss Mildred Battle, Robert E. Harvey to Wed

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Battle announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred, to Robert E. Harvey, son of Mrs. J. William Harvey and the late Mr. Harvey. The wedding will take place the latter part of November.

Both Miss Battle and Mr. Harvey are graduates of Central High School and attended George Washington University. Miss Battle is a member of Phi Eta Sigma honorary fraternity. Mr. Harvey received his LL. B. and LL. M. from National University Law School, is a member of the District bar, and is now connected with the Social Security Board.

Week of Opera Attracts Many Of Social Set

'Cavalleria Rusticana' Will Open Tonight at Rialto.

Curtains will go up tonight on Washington's first full week of grand opera this season when "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the Siamese twins of the golden horseshoe, will be presented by the Columbia Opera Company at the Rialto Theater with a brilliant audience to cry "bravo."

Among those who have planned to attend are the Irish Minister, Michael MacWhite, with a party of four; Chester Davis, member of the Federal Reserve Board, and Mrs. Davis, who will have with them as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee, of Washington and New York; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Frank Heywood, who expect to have guests; the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Nobile Capomazza, and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard and a party of friends.

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Stoddard, who is an enthusiastic supporter of the opera project, will not only be present tonight but every night of the season and will have guests with her at each performance.

Large blocks of seats have also been spoken for by the musically minded Holton-Arms School, National Cathedral School and Immaculata Seminary.

Others of the many who have made reservations are Mrs. R. G. Hunt, Mrs. Edwin Watson and guests; Dr. George Gretzman; Mrs. Arthur S. Henning, Mrs. F. E. Wright, Miss Sarah Cushing, Mrs. Ralph Molster, Mrs. A. Berry, Mrs. Milton Davies, Mrs. R. J. Hogan, R. F. Freund and H. E. Tipton.

Berrys Taking Wedding Trip

Miss Louise Kramer Is Married Here to Capital Man.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McKenney Berry, jr., whose wedding took place last Saturday, are now on a short wedding trip and will be at home after November 15, at 1913 Thirty-seventh street.

Mrs. Berry was the former Miss Sarah Louise Kramer, daughter of Mrs. Stephen Elliott Kramer and the late Dr. Kramer. Mr. Berry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. McKenney Berry, of this city.

The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock in the evening at St. Stephens and the Incarnation Church with the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, jr. She wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with a long coat and sweeping train. Her veil was of rare Brussels lace and was caught up in a cap effect. Her shower bouquet was of white roses, lillies of the valley and orchids.

Mrs. James R. Kirkland served as her sister's matron of honor and wore gold satin. Miss Edith Constance Kramer, also a sister of the bride was maid of honor, and chose a dress of dark rust satin.

Other attendants were Miss Barbara Edith Pipes and Miss Beverly Marshall.

The best man was T. Floyd Lorentzen, of Englewood, N. J., while the ushers were James R. Kirkland, Evans Barrett, John Kramer Sasnett and Donald Carter.

After the wedding there was a small reception at the Kennedy-Warren.

The bride attended George Washington University and the bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Mrs. McReynolds Speaks at Luncheon Today.

Mrs. Cecil I. McReynolds, noted lecturer and traveler, will be the guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon today at the Women's National Democratic Club.

She will give an informal account of her unusual adventures, "Sky High Over the Equator."

Mrs. Charles Brand will introduce her.

Those who will be at the speakers' table include Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, president of the Women's National Democratic Club, and Mrs. Edward Keating.

Dr. Esther Brunauer, international relations secretary of the Association of University Women, will address the club's education committee Thursday at 11 a. m. She has selected as her subject the "Foreign Policy of the United States in the International Crisis."

Meeting Postponed.

On account of the death of Mrs. William H. Talbot, organizing regent of the Col. Tench Tighlman Chapter of the D. A. R., the meeting of the chapter which was to have taken place today at the home of Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson will be postponed until October 26.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

NEXT TO THE BRIDE, the center of attention at the wedding of Mary Cowles to Willard Reed, jr., on Saturday, was her father, Dr. Edward S. Cowles, well-known New York psychiatrist, who runs the "Soul Clinic," recently written up in a national magazine and also has a private sanitarium on Park avenue. Half the women present at the reception at the 1925 F Street Club were dying to be psychoanalyzed right on the spot and said so. The other half were trying to make their minds a blank, just in case.

BY MIDNIGHT Saturday members of the wedding party were under the impression that it must be at least the following Tuesday. Any big wedding is strenuous, especially when followed by a hop to another city for a football game and an evening of dining and dancing, as this was.

The reception following the ceremony was attended by many from residential society. The club was decorated with vases of chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers, and under the generalship of Miss Mary Cummings a delicious breakfast was served consisting of creamed turkey, in Mrs. Curtis' beautiful silver tureens; fresh green peas, rice, lettuce salad and ice cream.

Among friends of the bride present were Mrs. Lee Warren, who was accompanied by Mrs. Phillips Thompson, of New York. Both wore the ever-smart black, and Mrs. Warren had added a double scarf of silver foxes to her ensemble. Mrs. William Wright and Mrs. Austin Kautz were others among the guests who chose black for the occasion.

"Buzzy" Hewes, just back from California, was at the church ceremony, as were the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito, making one of their by now rare public appearances. To skip back to the reception, others at the club were Mr. and Mrs. Brice Clagett—she is a daughter of Senator McAdoo; the former General Counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. James Alley, who came down from New York for the wedding; Royce and Louise Powell; William Ledyard Brewster, who arrived with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce; the Burnett Turners and the Phillip Bournes, Miss Rachel Campbell; Judd Thompson, Mrs. J. P. Conover and her son, Lieut. J. P. Conover, jr.; Katherine Phelps, Elsie Ekengren, Eugene O'Dunne and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Liggett.

AFTER THE Harvard-Navy game in Baltimore: A scream of police sirens, the roar of a motorcycle and a Government car whizzed by the crowd with the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson inside.... A few moments later a similar performance followed, and shooting past were Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt with Stewart MacDonald, Federal housing administrator, in their party... Others seen at the game were Laura Tuckerman, in a hunter's green suit with a yellow scarf, escorted by Bill McComb; the Walter Whites, Gibbs Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stone, of New York. The latter is the daughter of Mrs. Frederick Brooke, recently named president of the Girl Scouts of America.

Miss Marion Rosendorf Wed to M. D. Schwartz

The wedding of Miss Marion Eunice Rosendorf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Rosendorf, and Morris D. Schwartz, son of Meyer Schwartz, took place yesterday at the home of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father and mother, wore an ivory satin gown, fashioned on princess lines with a train. Her tulle veil was attached to an ivory satin Juliet cap, and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Charlotte Rosendorf, her sister, was her maid of honor.

The bride has studied at George Washington University and the University of Chicago. The bridegroom is a graduate of Southeastern University and practices law.

Legion Women Gather Gifts For 1,500 Christmas Boxes

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary are already assembling articles for their Christmas packages, for they will play Santa Claus this year to 1,500 disabled veterans and their families.

Mrs. Ada Riley is chairman of rehabilitation for the auxiliary and directs work of all chapters in the District among disabled veterans. It is by no means confined to the holiday season but is given special impetus as Christmas approaches.

Mrs. Riley's home will serve as headquarters this year for making and assembling of gifts for the men and also for wives and children of those who have dependents. Members of the committee will go there any time in the afternoon or evening from now until Christmas, whenever they have a little while to work.

All veterans in Mount Alto, Naval, Walter Reed and St. Elizabeths hospitals, in the Soldiers Home Hospital and the Temporary Home, in Southeast Washington, will be remembered. Each gift will be wrapped separately and all of them—eight articles—all the same—assembled in a large package for each patient. The auxiliary members secure a list from each hospital of what the men want, such things as writing paper, pencils, soap and washcloths, socks and cigarettes.

This year the members of the auxiliary will also inquire of the men whether they have families and what gifts will help them have a merry Christmas. This will relieve the minds of veterans who might not otherwise enjoy their own packages in the thought that their wives and children were not remembered.

Throughout the year the women visit the hospitals, on occasions, plan bingo and card parties for patients. Fifteen or 20 members go, taking prizes for both the men and women. One unit of the auxiliary usually is assigned to take charge of each party. Special programs, too, are provided, and units which have orchestras present concerts.

On October 27, Navy Day, the Government Printing Office Unit is giving a party at the Red Cross rooms of the Naval Hospital, and George E. Killeen Unit, of Georgetown, is presenting a program at Mount Alto. Another program is planned for Mount Alto on November 6 by the Kenneth Nash Unit.

Wife of New D. C. Pastor To Be Given Luncheon

Mrs. Cabot Stevens will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in honor of Mrs. Peter Marshall, wife of the new pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Marshalls, who arrived here October 1, came directly from Scotland, where they had been visiting his mother. Their previous home was in Atlanta, Ga.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. William Adams Slade will give a short talk. Additional guests will come in later for tea and a musical program being arranged by Miss Esther Linkins.

Mrs. Moore, Daughter Back from Foreign Trip

Mrs. Thomas Ewing Moore and her daughter, Miss Rose Mary Moore, have returned to the Shoreham for the season, after an absence of almost five months, during which they were traveling abroad.

They left in the spring on the liner Rex for Italy, and after six weeks in that country visited Baden-Baden, Paris and London, returning to New York ten days ago on the Ile de France. They were at the Shoreham also last winter.

Miss Dashiell To Give Recital

Story League Will Present President in Program Tomorrow.

Tomorrow evening at 8:30 at the Washington Hotel, the Story League of Washington will present its president, and former secretary of the National Story League, Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell, in a story recital, "Stories of Washington and Vicinity." In her program, Miss Dashiell will include the famous story of "Arlington House", which she gave before the national organization of the story leagues of America on the occasion of the last national convention.

Musical numbers will be presented by Max Kobre, violinist, with Miss Cecily Brown at the piano. Miss Willamy King and Miss Ruth King will dance the minuet, accompanied by Miss Meredith Haywood.

Miss Margaret Simmonds, vice president of the Washington Story League, will preside, assisted by Miss Winifred Alvather, chairman of the hostess committee, Mrs. Lyle Campbell, Miss Gertrude Niemyer, Mrs. Jane Donaldson, Mrs. Aileen Burns, Miss Evangeline Gruver, Miss Isabel Buckingham, Miss Gertrude Hartis, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Georgie Ramey, Miss Thelma Schmitt, Miss Ruth Beuchert and Mrs. Lucy Bussey.

The Washington Story League is an organization composed of young men and women devoted to the development of the art of story telling who give their services to civic organizations including the Home for Incurables, Glendale Tuberculosis Hospital for Children, Neighborhood House, Friendship House, homes for the aged and other institutions where story telling programs are welcomed.

E. W. Hassell Weds Miss C. F. Lincourt

Miss Corinne F. V. Lincourt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lincourt, of Providence, R. I., became the bride of Edward Warren Hassell, son of Mrs. Helen Hassell, of Charleston, S. C., at a ceremony which took place Saturday evening in the rectory of the Blessed Sacrament Church here in Washington. The Rev. Thomas J. Crowley officiated.

The bride wore an eggshell satin brocade gown in the empire style with a Juliet cap and a finger-tip veil. Her flowers were talisman roses and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Mrs. John Ellis Brown, served as her matron of honor and chose rust velvet with a hat to match. She carried yellow roses. John Ellis Brown served as best man. Following the reception, which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Abidee, jr., 3307 Quesada street, the couple left for their wedding trip. On their return they will reside at 329 Jefferson street.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

39-Year-Old Divorcee Can't Choose Between Two Men; She 'Admires' One; Other Can't Wed Now.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 39 years old and have been married and divorced. I was very much in love with my husband but was so deeply hurt by certain actions of his that divorce seemed the only remedy. That disillusionment did not make me cynical but did take something very important out of my life. Now I am facing a decision which I seem unable to make alone. I am neither fickle nor frivolous and it is important that the next step I take should be the right one.

* * * *

During my trouble, one friend, a man seven years younger than I, stood by me like a rock. During the six years since my divorce we have been keeping company. He is of different religion and nationality, but very respectable and intelligent and makes a good salary. He seems to feel that marriage is out of the question until his family no longer needs his help, yet he has several married brothers and sisters who are equally able to contribute to the family's support if they would; enough, at least, to enable him to marry. I admire his sturdy sense of responsibility, but I can not agree that our happiness should be altogether sacrificed for his family's sake.

* * * *

There is another man who wishes to marry me, and who is in a position to marry whenever I say the word. We are of the same race and religious faith, very congenial, and he makes a good salary, has an easy-going disposition and no family obligations. I do admire him.

* * * *

In marrying either man, I shall be hurting the other one. And if I marry, it will not be the romantic moonlight-and-roses affair my first marriage was. I shall be marrying for companionship and security in the years to come. My better judgment suggests I should marry the man without family obligations rather than wait several years for the younger man. If I marry the latter later on, even, it may still mean that I shall have to go on working. If I marry the other man, it means I can give up working, if I choose. Yet I hesitate to hurt the man who was such a fine friend during my time of need. Please give me your unbiased opinion. I shall be very grateful and shall be guided accordingly.

Very truly yours,
UNDECIDED.

Baffling Problem.

DEAR UNDECIDED: It is difficult to know how to advise you. One infers that your real preference is for the younger man; that the other is definitely second choice and a last resort. Generally speaking, it is inadvisable for a woman to marry for reasons which do not include love or a genuinely affectionate devotion. And yet, marriages made for common sense rather than romantic reasons are sometimes successful, depending upon the congeniality, adaptability, integrity and complementary needs of the contracting parties. I doubt, however, that any marriage is really practicable which does not carry some guarantee of mutuality of regard.

* * * *

Perhaps the answer to this problem is best arrived at by process of elimination. Though you are deeply interested in, devotedly attached to the younger man, I think you may as well count him out as a matrimonial prospect. For one thing, his loyalty to his blood kin (a marked characteristic of men of his race, by the way) will unquestionably continue to preclude the possibility of marriage to you for years to come. For another thing, since marriage has been so long delayed, he is too young for you—quite. Another five years and you will be, unquestionably, a middle-aged woman, whereas he still will be what the world calls a young bachelor. By the time he is ready to marry—if ever—he may no longer be romantically interested in you, perhaps even definitely bored by your spiritless waiting. It is entirely likely that he might then elect to marry a woman at least no older than himself and, preferably, younger.

* * * *

This brings us, then, to a consideration of your remaining "bird in the hand." I gather from your presentation of the case that you would be marrying him for no other reason than that he is yours for the taking and you have no other prospect actually available. This is a pretty poor basis for a woman to be marrying on—at 39. For, although I have said in a preceding paragraph that five years more will classify you definitely as being middle-aged, nevertheless, any woman of child-bearing age is still entitled to believe she may yet marry for real mate love.

* * * *

In my opinion only a woman who is biologically done with the springtime and summer of her life should contract marriage on the prosaic basis of companionship and economic security alone. Even then, she and her husband should have a common fund of affection, joint interests, etc., to draw upon. They should really enjoy—not just tolerate—each other's society, have similar tastes in friends and diversions and be so sufficiently settled in their ways that there is no possibility of a belated triangular emotional development. For the fairly young woman who marries a fairly young man without deeply caring for him—only because of what he can give her—is facing the possibility of losing him somewhere along the way to another woman who really could care for him and lets him know it. This kind of love cannot be faked, and whoever is denied it has always—whether or not he realizes it—a deep heart hunger for it.

* * * *

As a test of your congeniality with the alternative suitor, I suggest you break off with the younger man for a few months and devote yourself entirely to cultivating the society of his rival. At the end of such a trial period, you will know pretty definitely whether or not you could be happy, and make him happy, as his wife. Also, such an arrangement may force the other man into a new assessment of values. He may decide he can't live without you and insist on his married brothers and sisters assuming their fair share of his family's support.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

School Football Perils.

By this time many parents have learned that the summer season and summer athletics are pleasant and healthy compared to the autumn game that we play in America—football.

I, personally, believe that American football should be prohibited from all secondary schools. Certainly boys whose bones have not yet formed—that is, boys under the age of 14—should not be allowed to play it under any circumstances. No high school or secondary school of any kind should allow football unless provision is made for adequate medical attendance at all practice, as well as at all regular games, and also unless the school can afford adequate equipment to protect the players.

I notice in a picture magazine that it is estimated that at Ohio State University the player has to have $80 worth of pads and protective devices in order to make his playing reasonably safe. In this magazine's own words, he has to have "a veritable armor to keep him from breaking himself to pieces."

How many high schools can afford this kind of equipment? Is it not true, then, that the equipment is neglected and high school players are subject to consequent dangers?

It would seem so, because it was found by the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association that the number of injuries in high school football was 90 per 1,000 of players. By instituting a campaign for protection of high school football players, this was reduced in Wisconsin to 32 per 1,000. The improvement occurred on account of attention to the following factors:

Training coaches and officials to remove promptly from the game any boy injured.

Insistence on adequate physical examination before a boy is allowed to play football.

Insistence on having a physician available at regular practices and games, since immediate and trained care is essential.

Insistence that the school provide proper equipment for the protection of the players.

Radiators' Colors Affect Heat Ability

According to Howard Ketcham, color engineer of New York, "the color your radiators are painted has a lot to do with the amount of radiant heat you derive from them. Many an artistic housewife who has painted her radiators to match the decorative scheme of a room has made that room colder by using the wrong color."

Mr. Ketcham says, "Under certain conditions, a five-coil radiator finished in walnut brown yields only as much radiant heat as a three-coil radiator painted white or with one of the light aluminum finishes. A medium sized room with a five-coil, natural aluminum finished radiator was comfortable until the radiator was painted turquois blue to match the color of the room. Immediately after painting the radiator, the room became hard to heat."

Hair Should Be Suave and Sleek With Curl Ends Pointing Up to Complement Fall Clothes

Women Should Study Type Best Suited for Her Figure.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WITH TWO DEFINITE silhouettes in the current fashion mode, the wise thing to do is to choose the one that suits your individual figure and then have your hair styled accordingly. For the pencil silhouette, the hair should be suave and sleek, with smooth crown and ends curled up—not under. To complement the corseted silhouette, the coiffure features endless curls all over the head. All "hair-dos" for fall and winter are more elaborate than they have been in many years, emphasizing allure and romance. For formal evening, to harmonize with the Directoire trends in gowns, the hair is piled high on top of the head, in a mass of puffs and ringlets. The main theme in the new coiffures is height, with the styling deviating from one's natural hairline.

All these ideas and many more, relating to make-up, hair tinting and the newest permanent waving processes will be part of a three-day beauty conclave, marking the fifth annual Washington beauty and style show at the Raleigh Hotel, beginning today. A lecture by Dr. Howard Crum, plastic surgeon, also is scheduled on the program.

The fashion show Tuesday night will be under the direction of Gail, outstanding fashion authority of New York. The guest hair stylists are Ivan, of New York; Leon, of London and New York, and Fred Lang, of New York. The numerous demonstrations, lectures and style presentations are open only to the beauty industry of Washington and environs. The purpose of the meeting is both educational and scientific, aiming to improve the art of beauty cultivation, which authorities maintain, is "made and not born."

Ivan believes that it isn't the high hats which are the bane of many women's existence when collecting a fall wardrobe, but wrong hair styling which is in direct opposition to the lines of the hat. He is extremely fond of the skyrocketing hats, both conservative and extreme, but feels that their success lies entirely in the softness of hair at the sides, and gently raised off the neck. With the flaring Breton sailors, for instance, Ivan says that coiffures must be raised or the angle of profile will be definitely unbecoming. He is also an advocate of sleek simplicity in hair styling, with soft curls at the sides and the ears exposed.

Leon, like Schiaparelli, goes in for fireworks in his designing. He emphasizes copper or brown rinses for every coiffure and jewels and feathers, to dramatize evening stylings. He is enthusiastic about the modern pompadour, claiming that it gives height to the face and an air of youthfulness to the wearer, regardless of age. His diadem coiffure consists of swirling the hair over to the extreme left of the head with a shadow wave running vertically, the front half is raised in a pompadour with one wide shadow wave falling slightly over the left temple. For formal evening, this halo-like effect can be accented with ostrich or coq feathers giving further height to the coiffure.

Fred Lang favors the Directoire influence in his "hair-dos," fashioning romantic and smart coiffures, which feature puff-like curls. He is a strong advocate of two personalities in clothes and hair styling—utter simplicity for daytime, and intricate and elaborate versions for evening. To stress this idea he has created a daytime coiffure with broad shadow waves and softness toward the face; chic and simple. His "bouquet" coiffure for evening, which is creating a lot of favorable comment, consists of dozens of puff curls piled high at the crown of the head.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

At the Office.

Miss Speel—Now shut up everybody, I'm going to settle down and do some work.

Miss Speel—I don't want anybody to speak to me. I've got to get through early and do some shopping. I simply haven't a rag to my back.

Miss Jenke—Why you have, too! I'm the one that hasn't any clothes.

Miss Pinch—Why you've got LOADS of things——

Miss Trotter—Well if I don't get something new soon I'm going to get arrested.

Miss Speel—What have I got? Just tell me, what HAVE I got?

Miss Gripe—Nobody's got as few clothes as I have. I simply NEVER have anything.

Miss Speel—Say, tell me just what HAVE I got?

Miss Chitt — Shut up, please, everybody; I'm getting all these numbers mixed.

* * * *

Miss Nibbs—Say, I'm sorry, but I just want to ask one question and then I won't say another word. Where was that little place where Grace Perky used to go for her hats?

Miss Speel—Oh say, I know a lot better new place—they have the darlingest little shapes.

Miss Trotter—I think they're cute—with the little veils and everything.

Miss Pinch—I simply never can get a hat to look good on me. They say it's my chin.

Miss Jenks—Well, if it wasn't for my nose, I'd be all right.

Miss Speel—I've got too high a forehead——

Miss Chitt—Well I know it's not my face. It's the hats.

* * * *

Miss Jenks—Well, I'm ready for some more letters—why Mary Speel; have you got on some new SHOES?

Miss Speel—Oh these! Why they're old as the hills; I've had 'em two weeks!

Miss Nibbs—They're darling!

Miss Gripe—I haven't had a decent pair of shoes in ages.

Miss Nibbs—I have an awful time getting shoes. I have such a high instep.

* * * *

Miss Jenks—Say, this is POSITIVELY the last time I'm going to say a word but I just want to ask one question. If you all were me would you get a sequin jacket for your old velvet or buy a new little brocade?. . .

Current Scene Occupies Parley For Dietitians

American Group Opens 20th Convention at Richmond.

By Jean Green.
The Post Food Editor.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 17.—Problems of diet as they relate to the current American scene will be discussed this week at the twentieth annual convention of the American Dietetic Association, which opened here yesterday.

Among those who will speak will be Dr. E. V. McCollum, of Johns Hopkins University, on "Recent Developments in the Field of Nutrition," and Dr. James S. McLester, past president of the American Medical Association and professor of medicine at the University of Alabama medical school, who will talk on "The More Abundant Diet." Another paper that will be of special interest to dietitians because of its connection with recent events will be read by M. Faith McAuley, whose topic is "The Dietitian in the Emergency Program." Dr. W. H. Sebrell, of the United States Public Health Service, will conduct a symposium on pellagra.

A tea was held this afternoon for delegates at the convention. Among those in the receiving line was Miss Eva Marks, president of the District of Columbia Dietetic Association. Miss Marks is also a member of the house of delegates which holds its first meeting at this convention.

The convention formally opens today with a greeting from the president, Miss Lute Troutt, University Hospitals, Indianapolis, Ind. Gov. Peery of Virginia and Mayor J. Fulmer Bright of Richmond will welcome the delegates. An interesting week is anticipated by these food experts who have arrived here from all parts of the United States and from Canada.

Small Waistlines Dominate Styles

Paris (U.P.)—Autumn frocks call for tiny waists and whether you choose the 1890 silhouette or romantic gown, tailored sports clothes or draped afternoon costumes, you'll find the "nipped in at the waistline" tendency predominant.

Chanel laces the sides of a black taffeta bodice on a romantic gown with basque effect to a tiny waistline and romantic full tulle skirt. She binds the waistline beneath a loose bolero in a pink and black satin dinner dress and again uses a series of narrow black ribbon bands to form a long, fitted waistline for a pink pleated net frock.

Full skirts from waistline shirring at Louiseboulanger call for streamlined figures to give contrast. In a cream and gold lame dinner dress the skirt is set onto the bodice in gathers.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE OLD grad is in better form than he used to be. He looks healthier—and younger!

This year, says Lou Little, Columbia University's famous football coach, the grandstands are full of men who keep in condition and who take pride in their appearance. The day is past when the college athlete traded the pigskin for sheepskin and settled down to business and overweight.

Mr. Little, who can spot the flabby fat man a block away, has been making these unofficial grandstand surveys for years. "The figure with the dropped stomach and the heavy jowls is becoming a rarity, and the explanation, as I see it, is that there are more competitive games and a greater opportunity for playing them than ever before. Competition is the soul of sports as well as American business, and the average man gets a kick out of testing himself against an opponent.

"I can remember when it was very unusual to see a man with his clubs bound for the golf course. There were not many golf courses and they were not usually available to the average man. Now golf is any man's game. There are also plenty of squash courts and tennis courts, and handball and softball are becoming popular. The athlete whose appetite has been whetted for competitive sports can now find these activities at most of the gymnasiums."

If Mr. Little were asked to suggest a program for the old grad—and he was—he would recommend an uninterrupted activity in sports, the choice of games being modified as a man grows older, but never entirely abandoned. The athlete who is just out of college can find the opportunity for basketball and tennis. Later, he may turn to some of the less strenuous games—unless, of course, he is like the magnificent old gentleman, past 70, who makes a regular practice of going out to Baker Field, donning a track suit, and running up and down the field!

Having been a football star himself, Mr. Little knows the value of continued exercise. Squash is his favorite game, and he plays several times a week. He also watches his diet.

"Like most football men," Mr. Little says, "I seem to have a continual battle with my appetite, but I advise the team to come away from the table feeling as if they could eat a little more, and I have to follow my own advice. Besides, I'm told that more people die from overeating than from starvation."

Mr. Little is a pretty fine example of sensible living. He weighs 191 pounds—less than when he played football—and is in such splendid condition that he might be taken for one of the team.

And what about the team? Does a football player ever have to reduce? He does. Every once in a while one of the boys—usually the stockily built type—will have to cut down on his food until "he gets down to his best playing weight." The long, rangy fellow sometimes loses too much, but after the first few weeks of training they all harden up and the weight remains fairly stable.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 17.

MY TRIP to West Point, where the beautiful apprentice generals are manufactured in job lots, was not a success from the standpoint of the dear old school. As the record books already state, Columbia lost to the Cadets because one of our boys couldn't kick points after touchdown, and we all trailed the 50 miles home in glumness and gloom.

ALICE HUGHES.

But the jaunt wasn't a total loss by any manner of means. I had another chance to check on what the girls are wearing on Saturday afternoons. There were no startling costumes at the Point, but I was again reminded that the ladies didn't seem to feel official unless they had a gally colored chicken feather sticking northwest out of their felt and suede hats. Never have I seen so many feathers on sports hats. Being minus one, I was afraid the sergeant wouldn't let me in the stadium without a struggle. But he did, so I guess the feather thing is not yet a Federal law.

What is more, the junket gave me my first chance to see the gorgeous panoply of fall—which, in this latitude, is something to holler about! In fact, I think every city girl should be forced to leave town in the autumn, just to look at a few trees. Oh, it's lovely up there now along the lordly Hudson, in the American Rhineland! Every maple is a flaming torch, and the clumps of sumach are ablaze. Of course, the air is slightly fresh, and may make the cave dweller pretty giddy, but it wears off by the second half of the game.

Yes, Columbis lost, but I gained, Gained the assurance that far away from the stony shops of Madison avenue Mother Nature is still doing her ever-thrilling, ever magnificent stuff! I'll go again next year, by golly!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The Tiara Set has calmed down again, after those nassy old reports that John Jacob Astor and his red-thatched young frau, "Tucky" French that was, had busted up (owing to jealousy, according to that sweet little bird, The Vulture). Nothing to it. The young couple were soon reunited at the Virginia Hot Springs, and the local Tiara Set, sighing with deep relief, resumed its games of beanbag and hi-spy! . . .

* * * *

Meeting up with my friend, Mrs. Anna Graney, for 12 years a lady cop here, and specialist in catching employers whose minds are on skullduggery, I asked her where she did her biggest business. Checking a list of 200 arrests, mostly for what we used to call "mashing" back in my day, Coppette Graney said, "If your husband is between 40 and 45, keep an eye on him, for that's the dangerous age." I stopped her by asking what masculine age isn't dangerous! . . .

Mrs. Katsenberg, our steadiest First Nighter on Broadway, is still occupying her front-row seat at every opening. As long as Mrs. K. endures, there's a Theater in this town! . . .

Budgets for Newlyweds

A MARRIAGE that's going to be happy. The groom carries the bride over the threshold for luck—and they've already worked out their budget plan.

"We're going to get what we want," say these radiant newlyweds. "We won't let leaks or unexpected bills drain our money and our hopes with it."

Does that sound like a lot of pinching and bookkeeping to you? Budgeting is simple.

Suppose you want not only a nice home, but a car, furniture, and electrical equipment, too.

Then begin your budget by limiting payments, insurance and upkeep on your home to 25 per cent of your income. If you're tempted to skip that upkeep while your home's new, don't. Sudden repair bills can upset your plans for years.

Food for two—good food—needn't cost more than 16 per cent of your income. The trick is to buy not the small "twosome" packages and cans but the large ones, for they're cheaper per pound. With modern refrigeration you can keep food for days. And John won't remember—when you serve him a delicious corn pudding on Thursday—that you served him half the corn, scalloped, on Monday. A roast, too, which may seem high, lasts for many meals, costs little per meal.

As for clothes, build up a fund, about 10 per cent of your income. Buy between seasons.

So here you are! With essentials cared for and a good surplus left for operating and personal expenses—and the things you want most. Let our 40-page booklet, How to Budget Your Income, tell you how it's done, give you a plan easy to follow.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, How to Budget Your Income, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

IF you want a supremely comfortable inner-spring mattress, we will make one out of your old mattress for $9 and up.

ABOARD THE BERMUDA CLIPPER—We are northward bound, above the blue Atlantic, up about 20 times as high as the Washington Monument, and that reminds me that we haven't kept our promise to take the b. g. and the b. b. up for a view from the top . . . They're beginning to think it was just a political promise.

* * *

The gossip around Bermuda has been that Great Britain wants to make some sort of a gesture about paying its war debt . . . To many of the Bermudans, I must confess, this seemed to seem a trifle Quixotean and extravagant.

* * *

My inhibitions were slightly softened by a rum swizzle on top of a planters punch, so I repeated the suggestion I made to Calvin Coolidge a decade ago—that England give us Bermuda and Nassau and Jamaica in lieu of one of the billions . . . This didn't seem to go over so well with the Bermudans.

"—we'll take 'em on the debt."

Privately, I don't think Bermuda, et al., are worth quite a billion . . . But they're worth more than we'll probably get on the debts . . . I think I'd rather have Bermuda than Alaska, for example, especially in the winter time . . . The steward has just handed that wistful blonde a cup of chocolate.

* * *

All the passengers on the plane are mildly excited because we're due to swoop over the Bermuda-New York boat around noon . . . Wouldn't a Washington traffic cop laugh himself sick watching the bobby at the main intersection in Hamilton, Bermuda, directing the bicycle and carriage traffic?

* * *

That was a sight I won't soon forget, all the Americans in Bermuda gathered around the radio listening intently to Justice Black's speech; puzzled, frowning, rapt . . . One for the memory book . . . Then they shrugged and had another drink and went back to the dance outside on the terrace.

* * *

Here is Capt. Gray, who has flown this Pan-American clipper across the Atlantic four times . . . As impressive as the captain of a liner; a diplomat, even a hero. He has attached some sort of a gadget to the window and is sighting to find out how much crosswind and drift we are enjoying, if any . . . When he turns his back I take a peek through the eye-piece, and there are the little wavelets dancing across the scale, 10,000 feet below . . .

* * *

This reminds me how all the Pan-American pilots told me, when I was flying around South America in 1930, that there were at least a hundred American pilots as good as Lindbergh, and that any Pan-American pilot could fly a ship across the Atlantic . . . I thought it was just good-natured jealousy then, but now I believe it.

"traffic problem in Bermuda."

Ah, here is lunch at last, served on little tables at our seats . . . The young Englishman at my left hasn't much appetite . . . He is gazing out the window rather pessimistically . . . That curbs but does not cancel my appetite . . . The most distinctive thing about Bermuda, after all, is not its climate nor the elephantine shorts worn by his majesty's attorney general, but the total absence of automobiles.

* * *

Now, if all automobiles were exiled from Nantucket or Martha's Vineyard, those two islands might become as paradisiacal as Bermuda . . . How would Long Island seem without automobiles? I'd like to see some of the Long Island gentry pedaling around on bikes.

* * *

Two-thirds of the Bermudans are colored, and their manners are courtly . . . They all say "Good day" with a British accent when you pass them on the road, and they seem to have solved the delicate problem of deference without subservience.

* * *

I wish I hadn't eaten so much lunch . . . An airplane is a place for bouillon and toast, not for steak and potatoes . . . That young bridegroom is worried because he's trying to bring in three English razors and two gallons of whisky, and he's afraid Secretary Morgenthau will appear in person and try to collect the duty and maybe take his bride away from him.

Struck by Grid Player, Man Dies of Nose Injury

Knocked to the ground by a football player in the Redskin-Eagle game at Griffith Stadium October 10, Lawrence E. Robinson, colored, 28, of 805 O street northwest, died in Freedmen's Hospital yesterday believed to be a victim of blood poisoning.

Robinson was standing near the playing field when he was hit by a player hurtling out of bounds. Five days later he visited a doctor and exhibited a badly swollen nose. Yesterday he entered the hospital and died two hours later. An autopsy will be performed today.

'Nicky' Host To 80,000 At D. C. Zoo

Komodo Dragon Stars Also—in Role of Heavy Villain.

Nicky, Nageoma and Spring Song, giraffes who are playing leading roles among the Zoo's newest characters yesterday entertained their largest crowd since they reached America.

More than 80,000 persons swarmed into the Zoo from early morning until closing time, and a majority of these found their way into the new pachyderm house to visit the giraffes.

With their new names, and the colorful painted backdrops in their quarters, the giraffes played through the day like veterans, without a sign of stage fright. It was the first Sunday since the new pachyderm house opened.

Nicky and his companions did not have a monopoly on the visitors. "Komo," the angry Komodo dragon, played the heavy villain without a stop. His neighbors in the reptile house were also impressive but hardly popular.

Samson, the huge Sumatran tiger, and his cousin, the Siberian tiger, unlike the giraffes, were not hospitable. Most of the day they paced their cages, facing the visitors only when they lifted their heads to sniff the bars and growl under their breath. Prince Jo and Princess Hora, the black leopard, paid little attention to the crowds.

Sea Lions Still Popular.

Still popular, despite their new competitors, were the young sea lions in their pool along the lower Zoo walk. Except during their feeding hour at 3 p. m. they put on one of their busiest shows of the year, playing high-speed tag most of the day.

Except for the hardy Northern animals, most of the zoo was content indoors, assured of comfort. Many of the animals will not go out again until next spring.

Peak crowds of the day came around mid-afternoon, and at one time, according to Sergt. L. A. Tabinsky, of the National Zoo Police, traffic was lined up for five city blocks waiting to enter the north gate.

Six Lost and Found.

Parking areas overflowed earlier in the day, and cars lined every road. Only one minor collision was reported within the zoo boundaries, and no one was injured.

Out of the estimated 30,000 children, six were reported missing during the day, but they were all located and returned to their parents.

A toy bulldog was less fortunate. She appeared out of the heavy traffic at closing time to seek the protection of Zoo Policeman Jerry Collins. For several minutes Collins held the puppy in one arm as he directed traffic with the other. Later he arranged for the puppy to stay at the zoo until the owner returns.

One attendant, a veteran of 41 years, said it was the biggest day at the Zoo he had ever seen.

Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, drove through twice during the day, said he was pleased with the size of the crowd, but wouldn't stop to visit the animals.

Dr. Lin Says China Will Battle to End

A united China is determined to fight to the bitter end, Dr. Lin Lin, former research fellow at the Brookings Institution, said yesterday in an address at the adult Dr. Lin, recently appointed re-Memorial Church, 1810 Sixteenth street northwest.

Dr. Lin, recently appointed research fellow of the National Institute of Social Sciences, Nanking, has been prevented from assuming his new post by the present Asiatic conflict.

Poorly equipped, the Chinese people are prepared to suffer, but are confident, Dr. Lin asserted, that they will survive their invaders.

Pastor Praises Constitution in Catholic Hour

Document Showed Way for Benefits to Mankind, Radio Speaker Says.

The history of the Constitution is largely the history of increased benefits for mankind, the Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, said yesterday in his sermon from the church over Station WOL on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour. The Rev. Mr. Cartwright, who is director of the hour, presided.

Speaking on the topic "The Church and the Constitution," he said the Constitution "was one of the greatest examples of a written compact as the foundation of a great state. It showed the way for those who saw the necessity of a definite understanding as the condition of a good government . . .

"For about two generations after its enactment the history of mankind is very largely the history of man's efforts to secure for every land the benefits which our Constitution brought to us and to secure charters for every people.

"In that period chattel slavery and serfdom were abolished, the subjection of women, the patriarchal domination of children, caste and legalized class privileges, the exploitation of backward peoples, autocracy in government, the disfranchisement of the masses and the compulsory illiteracy, official intolerance and legalized bigotry were outlawed in the human conscience, and in a substantial degree were abolished."

Benediction was given by the Rev. Joseph E. Gedre, and the boy choristers presented the musical program.

Venezuelan's Art Will Be Exhibited At Museum Today

A collection of paintings by the young Venezuelan artist, Gilberto Antolinez, will be placed on exposition at the National Museum this afternoon at 2:30 in the presence of Dr. Diogenes Escalante, Minister of Venezuela.

The paintings, brought here by Senora Maria Luisa de Escobar Saluzzo, depict the life, religion and culture of the pre-Columbian inhabitants of Venezuela. Later they will be sent to Paris for exposition there.

Senora de Escobar Saluzzo, president of the Atheneum of Caracas and composer of a number of works based on musical themes of the aboriginal inhabitants of Venezuela, was awarded the Academic Palm of the French government in recognition of her cultural achievements.

Church Talk Urges Boycott of Japan

Branding recent attacks of Japan upon China as "international banditry," Clinton N. Howard, former chairman of the World Peace Commission and now general superintendent of the International Reform Federation, last night urged a world-wide economic boycott of Japan.

Speaking at the National Memorial Evangelical Church, Howard declared "anyone calling himself a Christian who can witness the assassination of the civil population in China and remain a pacifist at any price, does not have the spirit of Christ when he resorted to physical violence in driving the gangsters out of Jerusalem."

"If we would call upon all nations to break off all economic, financial, social and diplomatic relations with this pagan Asiatic nation, unless she immediately withdraws her armed forces from China," Howard declared, "it would end the war without the sacrifice of a single soldier."

Masons Honor Memory of Five Lodge Notables

Supreme Council of 33d Degree Opens Biennial Parley.

The biennial session of the Southern Supreme Council of thirty-third-degree Masons began yesterday morning at the Scottish Rite Temple, with memorial services for five prominent Masons who are buried in or near Washington.

The men honored in a eulogy by the Rev. S. Cary Beckwith, chaplain of the Supreme Council, were Gen. Albert Pike, Albert G. Mackey, Benjamin B. French, John Mills Browne and Hyman Witcover. Special committees placed wreaths upon the graves of these Masons after the service.

Gen. Pike, noted as a poet, philosopher and nature-lover, served as grand commander of the Supreme Council from 1851 to 1891. Mackey was president of the Atlas Publishing Co. and author of "The Government of the United States" and a number of books on free masonry.

Browne served for some years as surgeon general in the Navy and was treasurer general of the Supreme Council. French was another prominent Washington Mason and had the honor of conferring Scottish Rite degrees on President Andrew Johnson. Witcover, who acted as secretary general of the Supreme Council from 1923 to 1935, was a well-known architect.

The Supreme Council will observe "Constitution Night" at 8 p. m. today with speeches by Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, and Dr. Joseph F. Newton.

3 Offer Blood to Aid Former Postal Worker

Two women and a man offered their blood yesterday to Gordon Colon, 37-year-old former Postoffice Deartment guard, who lies critically ill of uremic poisioning at Gallinger Hospital, where it was said a transfusion was necessary.

Physicians said last night the transfusion would be made this morning. Two of the volunteers have blood types which match Colon's.

Man Found Unconscious Beneath Blazing Bed

Firemen answering an alarm at 1329 First street southeast last night found William Johnson, colored, 36, unconscious underneath a burning bed. The man was taken to Casualty Hosital, where he was reported to be in a serious condition from second-degree burns. Police said he had been hit by a lighted lamp hurled by another Negro.

Lessons in Diet Are 'Farce' To Hungry Pupils, Says Tutor

Head of Fifth Grade at Thomson School Tells How Boys and Girls Act Like 'Little Martyrs' in Classroom, Concealing Their Troubles.

"It's a farce! We give our children lessons in diet, tell them they must drink milk and orange juice and eat spinach, and what can they do about it? Nothing! Because there is nothing at home for them to eat!"

In these forceful terms, Mrs. Edna Hilton, fifth grade teacher at Thomson School, expressed her views on the free lunch question. "They come to school like little martyrs, listen to what we have to say and conceal the fact that they are hungry."

The only way the teacher has of learning actual home conditions is to make tactful inquiries concerning a family's income. "If you find a family of four living on $4 a week, you can be fairly certain that after deducting rent and clothing expenses, there isn't much left to eat on," Mrs. Hilton went on.

She told of a 14-year-old boy in her class who is not only considerably older than his classmates but far behind them in scholastic achievement. "His reading is about on a second grade level," she said. "I became curious and investigated the home. He, his mother and his father are living on the income of a sister, who works two days a in a 10-cent store, receiving $2 a day.

"He is of course undernourished. In addition he sometimes works from 7 to midnight on his paper route. No wonder he is behind the rest in spelling and arithmetic! There is nothing mentally defective about him. His attitude is fine, he co-operates splendidly."

Mrs. Hilton finds one bright spot in the picture. "Nature has a kind way of taking care of them. She numbs their appetites until they don't realize they are hungry. One Christmas I took a pupil through the stores and showed her some fancy fruits and candies. Most children would have been overjoyed. She just looked at them as though they were stones."

Crash Hurls Cab Off Road; 1 Dies, 3 Hurt

Woman, 60, Crushed to Death, Baby Lives; Driver Held.

Miss Pauline Marchalk, 60, of 1910 Kalorama road northwest, was killed instantly and three other persons, one a baby, were seriously injured when a District taxicab in which they were riding smashed into another car and rolled down an embankment 9 miles west of Warrenton, Va., on U. S. route 211, last night. All were members of the same family.

Ernest Gasser, of 2233 Fortieth place northwest, nephew of Miss Marchalk and owner and driver of the cab, and his wife, Myrtle Gasser, 29, were unhurt. Those injured were Gasser's daughter, Barbara, 6½ months old, cuts and bruises, condition reported poor at Children's Hospital; his sister, Miss Helen Gasser, 19, possible skull fracture, and his cousin, Miss Bernice Wilson, 25, severe back injuries. Miss Gasser and Miss Wilson, both of whom live at the Fortieth street address, were taken to Fauquier County Hospital at Warrenton.

Car Rolls Down Bank.

According to police, the accident occurred on a straight stretch of road on a hill. Gasser's cab with its six occupants, they said, collided headon with another car, rolled down a 30-foot embankment, turned completely over and came to rest on its wheels. Miss Marchalk was killed instantly, receiving a crushed chest and broken neck.

R. L. Moser Warrenton undertaker, said Gasser was held in Culpeper County, Va., where the accident occurred, on a technical charge.

Twelve persons were injured, three seriously, in accidents in and near the city yesterday.

Lester B. Jenkins, private first class at Fort Washington, Md., was seriously injured last night by a hit and run driver, near the entrance to the Fort. Jenkins was found by three men who took him to the fort hospital, where his condition was said to be critical.

Runaway Hunted.

Police of Washington and nearby Maryland counties broadcast a lookout for the runaway car. The driver of the car was described as a light skinned colored man, hatless and wearing a brown suit. Although the license number was not learned, his car, a light coupe or roadster, was known to have a broken windshield.

Harvey Farrell, 30, of Wayside, Md., was near death in Providence Hospital last night of a fractured skull and internal injuries received in an accident near Issue Postoffice in Charles County, Md.

Farrell's automobile was in collision with one operated by Arthur Greenfield, colored, 26, of 16 Fourteenth street northwest, who received cuts to his head and legs. He also was treated at Providence.

A two-car collision at First and East Capitol streets early yesterday sent five persons to Casualty Hospital.

Wilbur Fookes, 54, 5625 Eleventh street northwest, driver of one machine, sustained lacerations to his scalp and head injuries; Herbert Haderman, 62, 322 Twelfth street southeast, possible fractured ribs; Pearl Holmes, 26, Seagirt, N. J., cuts to her leg; Fred Holmes, 39, also of Seagirt, bruises on his face; William Barry, 32, Hotel Grafton, lacerations to his forehead, and Joan English, 22, 1614 I street northwest, bruised hip and laceration to the left knee.

Police said Barry was driving the second automobile.

2 Hurt in Crash.

Ray S. Richardson, 44, and Florence Richardson, 48, both of 3228 Worthington street northwest, sustained cuts and bruises in an accident at Sixteenth and V street. They were given first aid at Emergency Hospital.

Robert Holloway, 20, of 807 Eighth street northwest, received a fractured right leg and severe cuts, when his motorcycle crashed into a parked automobile at Sixth and H streets northeast.

The sole survivor of an automobile accident near Dumfries, Va., Saturday night, in which two men, a woman and a baby girl were killed, regained consciousness long enough yesterday in Alexandria Hospital to gasp that she was Helen Easter, 19, of Monessen, Pa.

Typical Feminist

U.S. China Aide Chosen Typical Career Woman

Voters League Crams Book With Names of Feminine Office Holders.

Hundreds of feminine names are closely crammed into a 15-page catalogue to be issued today by the National League of Women Voters, 726 Jackson place northwest, as the 1937 edition of "A Survey of Women in Public Office." Local, State and Federal posts held by women, from the Secretary of Labor and Minister to Norway to "a handful of women constables in Florida, Louisiana and Virginia," are listed.

Miss A. Viola Smith, of Los Angeles, Calif., who received a law degree from George Washington University, entered the foreign service of the Department of Commerce, was sent to Peiping in 1920, and transferred to Shanghai, where she is now, has been selected as typifying the thought underlying the 1937 resume of women's public progress since suffrage.

Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, said yesterday concerning the choice of Miss Smith:

"One may even pause to be glad she bears that wide spread and substantial American name. She is an excellent illustration of a woman who enters a difficult field, does a good job over a long period of years, and continues to function efficiently through any emergency that arises."

There were 162,518 women in the Federal executive civil service as of December 31, 1936, according to the catalogue. Two dozen women are listed as now or formerly in Congress. The largest number was in the short session of the Seventy-first Congress when nine women were members of the House of Representatives.

Miss Martha Byrne, register of New York County, which contains New York City, is named as the holder of the most highly paid position in local government. She receives $12,000 a year.

First Lunch To Be Served Pupils Today

WPA Workers to Prepare Hot Meals for Poor Children.

Fight Tonight to Swell Fund; Two Other Benefits Arranged.

Today's the day when the first indications of the success of the free lunch campaign will be seen. Funds sufficient to buy lunches for needy children for about a month have been obtained and the first lunches will be served today.

WPA trucks will leave the central kitchen at 1640 Wisconsin avenue taking food to 96 parochial and public schools. About 5,000 pupils will be fed a hearty meal consisting of macaroni and cheese, tomatoes, bread and butter sandwiches, apples and a pint of milk.

The food will be prepared by WPA workers and reheated at the schools. The Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture has approved the menus.

Those who wish to see the lunches continued throughout the school year may help by attending the benefit boxing bouts tonight at 8:30 at Griffith Stadium. A general admission ticket, which costs $1, assures the purchaser some thrilling boxing and a school child hot lunches for three weeks.

Local debutantes will do their bit for the cause Thursday and Friday, when they will handle the food and program concession at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club horse show in Chevy Chase. Proceeds will be added to the lunch fund.

Friday afternoon and evening Tommy Larkin, motion picture cameraman, will lecture on technicolor at Central High School. His talks are sponsored by the District of Columbia Parent-Teacher Association for the benefit of the fund.

Catholics Honor 5 Going on Missions

A departure ceremony was held yesterday at the Foreign Mission Seminary of Holy Cross, Catholic University, honoring five missionaries who left last night for service in India. The farewell sermon was preached by the Rev. Francis P. Goodall, c. s. c., superior of the seminary and United States procurator for the missions.

Those honored were the Rev. George Pellegrin, c. s. c.; the Rev. Anthony Weber, c. s. c.; the Rev. Leon Boarman, c. s. c.; Brother Fabian Leimeister, c. s. c., and Brother Liguori Denier, c. s. c.

BATTLES LEADS REDSKINS TO A 34-TO-20 VICTORY

The Washington Post Sports

14 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1937 X*

This Morning

Kindly Read This and Act Accordingly.

Please go to the Free Lunch Fund bouts at Griffith Stadium tonight. Every ticket purchased will buy more than seven lunches for one of the army of kids who attend the District schools. Those kids are hungry at lunch time.

POVICH.

What else is there to say?

Even if you can take your prize fights or leave 'em, there's not much excuse for not contributing to the fund. They've made it easy for you to give your buck. Just collar the first cop you see today, or the first fireman, tell him you have a dollar for the fund and get your receipt in the form of a ticket to the fights. If you don't like fights, just tear the ticket up and bask in the satisfaction of a charitable deed.

* * * *

The Free Lunch Committee is gambling on your generosity, on the belief that the milk of human kindness is coursing through your veins. The committee is spending $4,000 to stage its fight show tonight and it wants that money back—several times over. A hundred thousand kids are waiting on your answer. Of course, if you've never been hungry, you wouldn't quite appreciate it.

* * * *

Sure, there are plenty of the children of the well-to-do who will have their lunches in any case. But the tummies of others are not so well-rounded. In certain schools lunch time is only a time of day for the poorer kids. Scrawny little ones actually go hungry. In one school room, at least, the teacher pads her own lunch, leaves it mostly uneaten and then leaves the room, asking no questions when she returns to find the leavings already devoured.

No kidding, it does happen in that schoolroom. And in how many more you can draw your own conclusions. In families where there are a passel of kids, the going is awful tough. You've probably heard about cases like that.

But the committee isn't relying completely on our understanding of the situation in the schools at lunch time. It isn't coming to you with empty hands. It's trading not only on your charitable instincts, but on your practical demand of value for value received. It's giving you a fight card that, alone, is worthy of your contribution.

* * * *

The program that Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn and Promoter Joe Turner have gratuitously arranged is that the fight fan would call a honey. Forty rounds of boxing between well-matched fighters who, in deference to the cause, will be fighting for purses far below their normal amount. And the cost of Griffith Stadium to the committee will be exactly nothing.

* * * *

When Lou Gevinson steps into the ring against Danny London in the feature bout of the evening, the folks who have contributed will be sitting in on the absolute best match that the promoters could procure—a battle between a top-ranking featherweight (London) and the Washington lad who is expected to go further in the prize-fight profession than any graduate of local rings thus far.

No mere fill-in is London. Numbered among his victims is the present featherweight champion of the world—Harry Jeffra. And London's defeat of Jeffra was no mere decision affair. He knocked Jeffra out cold. That is the kind of opposition they have lined up for Gevinson tonight.

The local boy will be on the long end of the odds. A tyro at the business compared to London, Gevinson will be meeting a foe who has never lost to a southpaw.

* * *

The so-called semifinal on the card that Goldie Ahearn has arranged would stand on its own as a featured bout on any other program. It is the battle between Cowboy Howard Scott and Irish Johnny Dean—a pair of welterweights whose rivalry is the prime topic along fistic row.

* * *

This bout Ahearn was saving for the opening of his indoor season at the Arena, but generously added it to the Lunch Fund card. Like Gevinson and London, Dean and Scott will battle it out for 10 rounds, and, like the top bout, the semifinal holds great prospects for a slam-bang finish.

"Grudge fight" is an overused word in the vocabulary of promoters, but the Scott-Dean battle actually qualifies for that exciting description. No love is lost between the pair and actually they came to blows in the office of Ahearn before the fight was scheduled.

* * *

But I don't know why I have to go on like this. I've told you that kids are going hungry in the schools at lunch time. And that your buck will feed seven or more of 'em on any given day. Here's one press pass that won't be used tonight.

Presidents Defeat Portsmouth Cubs

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 17.—Getting a break in the last period, after being held scoreless, the Washington (D. C.) Presidents defeated the Portsmouth Cubs, 7 to 0, this afternoon in a Dixie Professional Football League contest. The game was witnessed by 2,500 fans.

After a sustained drive and with but 6 yards to go, Washington got the advantage of a 5-yard offside penalty and Tom Oliver promptly hit the line for the score. Gene Augusterfer, former Catholic University star, place-kicked for the extra point.

The line-up:

V.M.I. Leads In Southern Conference

Cadets Forge Ahead as Duke Campaigns on Foreign Fields.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 17.—With Duke's defending champions campaigning in foreign territory for three weeks in a row, V. M. I.'s enterprising Keydets slipped into top place in the Southern Conference race today with three victories in as many starts.

The Blue Devils have captured two decisions over loop foes, while The Citadel and Washington and Lee were successful in one game each. North Carolina's Tarheels, who finished second to Duke last season and in 1935, have collected two wins, but were tied by South Carolina.

Coach "Pooley" Hubert's V. M. I. team leaves the Conference feud for two weeks, meeting Virginia Saturday and Army on the following week-end. Then the Keydets must topple Maryland, The Citadel and Virginia Tech for a clean slate in the circuit.

Duke will journey to Colgate Saturday for the first Eastern invasion made by a Wade-coached eleven in 14 years. The Blue Devils will then face four Conference squads on the home stretch for the title—Washington and Lee, Wake Forest, North Carolina and North Carolina State.

Games this Saturday will have little effect on the circuit standing with the leading teams playing outside the loop. Major contests within the conference area will find Tulane at North Carolina and Syracuse playing at Baltimore.

The Tarheels will be defending a record showing no defeats for the season. Tulane won at New Orleans last year, 21 to 7. Maryland trounced Syracuse, 20-0, in the latter's stadium last year.

State honors will be involved in several games. N. C. State will attempt to avenge a 9-0 defeat received from Wake Forest last year; Washington and Lee will defend its

12 Boxers Will Punch So Kids May Eat Lunch

Forty-four Rounds Are Offered on Benefit Card at Griffith Stadium; 'Gate' Due to Total $15,000.

By Jack Paulus.
Sports Editor of The Post.

It's kiddies' night tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Don't get us wrong, kids. The gates won't be opened free to all kids who want to see 44 rounds of boxing. But the hearts and pocketbooks of some 15,000 Washington fight fans have opened and poured approximately $15,000 into the coffers that will provide hot lunches for school children this winter.

Hot punches for hit lunches will be the theme song in the stadium ring as some of the town's ring favorites do battle. And the rat-tat-tat of every punch is the jingle of the fund's cash register.

The card itself, while lacking a champion, has caused a championship flow of gold. Jim Turner and Goldie Ahearn, promoters of the show, and the committee in charge estimate that approximately $10,000 will be realized for charity from tonight's festivities.

So-featured on the program are Lou Gevinson and Danny London and a minor riot presenting Cowboy Scott and Irish Johnny Dean. Either of the fights would make an arena feature this winter.

The top morsel is, of course, the Gevinson-London scrap. The local Southwest southpaw, a natural puncher who has the makings of a champion, goes into the stadium ring the underdog. His New York opponent, London, was rated last night a 2-1 shot to win by decision and a 5-3 shot to kayo Lou.

London Has Answer.

London is the same young gentleman who did a Houdini on Matchmaker Ahearn last March. If he is called upon to explain that "runout" in the ring tonight his answer will likely be a salvo of punches aimed at the prominent proboscis of our laddie known as Lou. Lou will answer with gloved remarks of his own—strictly a Leftist argument.

Danny did the fade-out act on the day he was to meet Ray Ingram, at a time when Ray was rated the eighth ranking featherweight. Ray has hit the cellar in the ratings of late, but returns to tonight's card in a "bit" role.

Two Are Tied For Eastern Scoring Lead

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 17.—Sid White, Brooklyn College, and Bill Tranavitch, Rutgers, scored 37 and 20 points, respectively, this week-end to climb into a tie for the East's individual high scoring football honors with 50 points each.

White played with a fractured left hand, but was still the best man on the field as he scored six touchdowns and an extra point against Wagner yesterday. Tranavitch, top man on Rutgers' undefeated outfit, counted three touchdowns and booted two extra points against Springfield. He has kicked eight extra points and scored seven touchdowns so far this season.

Tony Rozman, Lebanon Valley, and Van Ladd, Union, bringing back the "lost art" of field-goal kicking, have booted three each this season to lead in that department. Rozman collected all three of his against Delaware yesterday.

Bill Bragg, Marshall College guard, led in kicking extra points, sending nine between the uprights in four games. A point back of him, with eight each, were Tranavitch, Rose of Cornell, Gibson of Dartmouth, and Albano of Niagara.

Coach Pixlee Sees Chance to Stop Big Tide

By James E. Pixlee,
Head Football Coach, George Washington University.

The dubious honor that befalls a football coach when his team is about to meet one of the strongest elevens in the country is mine this week and I cant' say that the position is exactly one to be envied. After all, Alabama has walked out of the Rose Bowl three times recognized as the national champion and any coach gives more than mild consideration to a meeting with a team directed by Frank Thomas.

I watched Alabama yesterday in the game with Tennessee and I confess the Crimson Tide offered many things for our coaching staff to think about this week. Whether we can do anything to stop the great exhibition of power and deception we saw against the Volunteers will not be settled until Saturday afternoon.

However, I think I can say, without getting out on a limb, that this is the best chance to stop Alabama we've ever had. The first time we met them, in 1932, our boys stepped out on the field scared to death. The name of "Hurry" Cain, B'ama's great halfback, had them worried. Of course, we weren't in a class with Thomas 'team that season, but I didn't feel so badly about the 28-6 licking we took.

The less said about the 1935 game the better. In fact, the less said about our team of that year the better. We started the year with good prospects and ran into a series of unfortunate happenings, including two straight weeks of rain in training camp, and with a bad start, we never did get on our feet. The defeat of Alabama left us great respect for an Alabama team that had been somewhat humiliated by a tie with Howard the previous week and was headed for revenge.

One reason I believe we have our best chance to leave a slight dent in the Crimson record this year is because I feel Tennessee took a great deal out of Thomas' team. This is the most important game of the year for both teams and regardless of the score, both walk off the field with a thorough realization that they've been in a bitterly fought contest.

I have heard some talk among football people to the affect that the Tide team is not quite up to the standard of the past few years. It's true that Thomas lost a number of key men, but he has experienced replacements for every post left vacant and in Joe Kilgrow, the alternate captain and left halfback, he has a triple-threat star comparable to all those great players the Capstone institution has produced in recent years.

Of course, when you play Alabama you must remember it's not a question of stopping one team. They generally can throw three or four elevens of almost equal strength on the field down at Tuscaloosa and this year seems to be no exception. Alabama sends 30 or 35 men into the game against us and our boys always say they never can tell the difference between the first team and the so-called third stringers.

The next five days should bring a greater co-ordination in the George Washington team than we've seen at any time this year. With our hardest games coming in October and early November, we were content to put little pressure on our squad for the first two games. Now we've got to reach a peak and we hope this week's work will bring the team to its highest pitch to date this season. All of our boys realize what a fine stand against Alabama means to them and to the university and I think they'll all be at their best for this game.

Ace Halfback Runs Rings Around Foes

Intercepts Pass and Dashes 65 Yards for Touchdown, and Then Races 60 and 71 Yards for Others; 12,385 See Game.

By Shirley Povich.

The Cliff Battles Sunday Hiking Club, otherwise known as the Washington Redskins, convened at Griffith Stadium yesterday afternoon, led the Pittsburgh Pirates a merry chase and left 'em completely tuckered and completely beaten.

The score was 34 to 20, which is fairly indicative of how close the Pirates came to catching Battles on his touchdown jaunts which were three in number and averaged 65 yards in length. Professional football's fans to the number of 12,385 turned out for a football game and sat in on a sprinting carnival.

Chief sprinter was big, blond Battles, who operates from a halfback post. Battles didn't trifle with mere first downs or 40-yard gallops. He toted an intercepted pass for 65 yards for one touchdown, he swept 60 yards around Pittsburgh's left end for a second touchdown, and, as a final fluorish, scampered 71 yards through tackle for a third touchdown. He had a fair day.

And when it was all over, when the sweaty athletes returned to their dressing rooms, Battles keeled over as he undressed for his shower. He was in a near collapse, albeit a seemingly well-merited one. The ammonia bottle restored his senses.

Redskins Faced Defeat.

As late as the third quarter, the Redskins were a beaten team. Beating the Washington crew at its own passing game, the Pirates whipped a pair of touchdown passes into the hands of Johnny McNally and "Tuffy" Thompson and zoomed into a 13-to-6 lead at the end of the first half.

Then, in the third quarter, the Redskins struck back, first to tie the score at 13-13 and then to make a shambles of the ball game as Sammy Baugh began to hit the mark with his passes and Battles went berserk. The Redskins reeled off four touchdowns before 20 minutes of the second half had run its course, and then sent Battles, Baugh and big "Turk" Edwards to the showers with Washington in possession of a 34-13 lead.

The tip-off on what kind of a ball game it was to be occurred on the third play from scrimmage, when Smith's short pass over the line fell into the hands of Battles, who darted for the far sidelines, picked up some superb downfield blocking on the Pirates' 15 and crossed the goal standing up after a 65-yard jaunt.

Baugh's Shots Miss.

But then the Redskins' went into eclipse for the remainder of the half, Baugh completing only one of seven passing attempts and the Washington running attack foundering against a bristling Pirate line. As the Pittsburgh club reeled off the tying touchdown in the first quarter and another to take the lead in the second quarter, a press-box wag was constrained to wisecrack that there were only two things wrong with the Redskins—their line and their backfield.

Pirates Advance.

With the entrance of Coach Johnny "Blood" McNally into their blackfield, the Pirates perked up. With McNally tossing and catching passes, with John "Bull" Karcis pile-driving through the Redskins' line, the Pittsburgh club penetrated into Redskin territory. From the Washington 42-line, Fiske flipped a pass to McNally, who took the ball behind the outwitted Justice on the Redskins' 5-yard line and crossed standing up. Weinstock's kick tied the score at 7-7.

The touchdown play that put the Pirates in a 13-7 lead in the second quarter covered 65 yards. McNally whipped the ball to "Tuffy" Thompson, former Minnesota ace, and Thompson dashed 59 yards for the score. He skidded across the goal after being tackled by Baugh on the 1-yard line. Weinstock missed the attempt to convert the goal.

Another Pittsburgh touchdown—on a 64-yard pass from McNally to Sorte—was nullified when officials discovered offside play, and the half ended with the figures still 13-7 in favor of the Pirates.

The Redskins underwent some kind of a transformation between the halves, apparently. Immediately with the start of the third quarter,

Navy Nettled By Tie, Points For Ramblers

Second Half Showing Against Harvard Boosts Sailors' Stock.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 17.—Disappointed at not winning from Harvard Saturday, but feeling that the team showed strength and gave promise of much more, Navy people are generally pleased with the showing in Saturday's game.

Comparative weakness in the first half is laid to the fact that many members of the team were in their first big game, and it is felt that the eleven's real power was shown in the second half.

Lem Cooke, who played such a remarkable game, was only slightly injured when he left the game in the second half, and is not likely to be kept out of practice at all, though those who played in the game will be given a rest over tomorrow.

The team will now be pointed for the Notre Dame game in South Bend next Saturday. One group of B. squad has been drilled in the plays of that team while the other was prepared in the Harvard formations, and the former will be ready to work against the varsity during the coming week.

Saturday's game opened a number of positions so well did all of the linemen perform, as well as several of the reserve backs. The work of Ben Jarvis and Frank Lynch, tackles, and Herman Spector, guard, was particularly notable, as was that of Emmett Wood and Ulmont Whitehead in the backfield.

Wood, a chunky recruit from the plebes of last year, who weighs nearly 180 pounds, could not be prevented from making a substantial gain every time he carried the ball. Whitehead, also a plebe back last year, is an excellent punter, as well as a good carrier.

Bill Ingram, who entered the Harvard game only to make the final pass to Powell, which so nearly won the game, is in good shape and will take full part in the practice of the week.

Baylor Is Victor.

Shreveport, La., Oct. 17 (AP).—Horley Jennings, of Baylor's Golden Bears, took the blankets off his forward passing ace, Billy Patterson, just long enough in the first half to run up three touchdowns and then allowed the little chunker to sit on the sidelines and watch Baylor coast to a 20-to-0 victory over the Centenary College gents yesterday.

Silver Spring Ahead.

The Silver Spring Merchants eleven swamped 260th Coast Artillery, 25 to 0, in a game played yesterday on Bullis Field in Silver Spring.

Md. Park Wins.

Governor Quinn Threatened With Impeachment in Row With O'Hara

100 Soldiers Are Guarding O'Hara Track

Martial Law Prevails as Governor Seeks to Halt Racing.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 17.—Rhode Island National Guardsmen tonight clamped martial law on wealthy Narragansett Race Track and announced that Gov. Robert E. Quinn's edict against opening of the fall meet tomorrow would be carried out to the letter.

With bayonets gleaming in the light of a full moon at the nearly empty track, guardsmen paced their beats virtually in solitude after a day spent in turning away curious thousands. Meanwhile the State awaited the result of an open letter Harry F. Curvin, Pawtucket director of public safety, said he wrote to the Governor threatening "impeachment."

Curvins' letter was published in an extra edition of the Providence Star-Tribune as the guardsmen took up their posts at the track. The Pawtucket official, who also is Democratic majority leader in the Rhode Island House, warned the Governor in the letter "if you carry out your threat and inflict the law-martial upon the peace-loving people of Pawtucket and the town of East Providence, in wilfull violation of the constitution and laws of the State and in defiance of the repeated decisions of the Supreme Court of the State," he would invoke an article of the State constitution "and place you under impeachment charges forthwith." He said he was sending the letter to every member of the House.

Says Authorities Able.

Curvin declared the civil authorities of Pawtucket were "able to handle any situation which may arise Monday, October 18."

Gov. Quinn, in proclaiming martial law last night, declared a state of insurrection existed at the track and said "numerous acts of violence" have occurred there.

Adjt. Gen. Herbert R. Dean led the guardsmen to the track and placed Col. Earl C. Webster in command. Gen. Dean declared the track a "no mans' land for court orders."

Col. Webster in a press conference said he "found no state of insurrection" or "violence" at the track, but insisted there would be no racing there tomorrow. He said his men were equipped with gas and riot sticks—and with ammunition for their rifles in an emergency—and that they were specially trained in riot duty.

The colonel said 300 men were mobilized.

The troops moved in at 8:30 a. m. today after the Governor's proclamation came as a new step to shut down the track owned by Walter E. O'Hara who had defied a move to oust him from its administration.

Sale of liquor was forbidden within the 1-mile limit, which included several privately owned buildings and dwelling houses. Track employes who were preparing the dirt oval for tomorrow's scheduled card were sent home to "await further orders." No one was allowed inside the guard lines.

O'Hara Stays at Track.

O'Hara, who has been violently at odds with Gov. Quinn for several weeks, and his attorney, Raymond J. McMahon, remained in O'Hara's penthouse office atop the track grandstand. Gen. Dean and Col. Earl C. Webster, commanding the troops, set up a temporary headquarters at the side of Newport avenue, main highway leading to the track.

Traffic jammed nearby roads as news spread that the National Guard had taken possession of the track approaches.

Dean said a provisional regiment of 250 men would be in the area before morning.

McMahon, in a statement, quoted Col. Webster as saying he had found "no evidence of insurrection."

The Governor, in last night's "insurrection" proclamation, contended the "danger" of attendance of "gangsters, criminals and persons of ill repute" at the fall meeting "will cause serious breach of peace" and result in "injury to our citizens" which civil authorities would be "unable to cope with."

Earlier, the Governor charged the Narragansett Racing Association had failed to comply with a race division ruling that a list of track officials be filed ten days before the opening of any meet. He asserted "it is now too late to comply with that rule."

Despite Gevinson's eight professional fights, all of them fought here in his home town, the lad is still pretty much of a crossword puzzle. One day he looks like a combination of Benny Leonard-Lew Tendler. The next he looks like a stumblebum trying to find his way out of a subway turnsile.

But if Lou has class, and this corner, for one, has a sneaking suspicion that he's a champ, he will have to prove it tonight. Mr. London, unlike the bridge, will not be falling down.

What has been brazenly billed as a "grudge match" appears on this card. The fight racket being what it is, at least one "grudge match" is inserted in every card. It's like the Mickey Mouse attraction at the movies—lots of fun, but no harm done.

How It All Started.

The "grudge" principals tonight are a couple of young gentlemen picturesquely named Howard "Cowboy" Scott and "Irish" Johnny Dean. One of the prefight publicity stories had it that the lads nearly fought it out (bare fists and evethying!) in front of Goldie Ahearn's haberdashery. Why they didn't pick somebody else's haberdashery, or even a hash joint, is one of the amusing mysteries of this business.

Anyhow, Cowboy and Johnny will mix it up in a co-featured tenrounder. The lads were former stablemates. They claim the rift was caused when Dean wasn't allowed to fight Lou Ambers, the lightweight champion, and Scott was. Scott did pretty well, too, both here and at Hartford.

Scott and Dean have never met in an actual match, though Irish Johnny claims he has beaten up Scott in gym grills. If the boys are half as mad at each other as they say, the fight will be, to be strictly Park avenue, a corker.

Three six-round events offer Ray Ingram, local featherweight, meeting Al Reid, of New York; Baby Manual, Florida feather, facing Armando Sicilia, of Chicago, and George Abrams, local middleweight, meeting Joey Spangler, of Richmond.

The four-round opener, providing the comedy effect, will have Sammy Williams and Battling Zuzu, a couple of colored boys.

The opening bout goes on at 8:30 o'clock. Pull up to your seats around the ring so that a lot of hungry kids can soon pull up to their seats around a lunch table.

King College Wins.

Mangrum, Revolta Are Pro Leaders

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 17.—Ray Mangrum, slender Dayton (Ohio) shotmaker, toured the rain-soaked Country Club course with a 66, five under par, today to boost him and his partner, Johnny Revolta, into second place in the Oklahoma City $5,000 four-ball golf tournament, only 1 point behind the leaders, Horton Smith and Harry Cooper, of Chicago.

The watery greens caught up with Smith, whose putting touch has kept his team in the lead three days. Lawson Little, of Chicago, and Paul Runyan, of New York, defeated Smith-Cooper, 2-up, to leave the favorites with a plus 9 score.

Revolta and Mangrum fired a low ball 65 at Ky Laffoon and Dick Metz, another Chicago pair, to win, 3 up, and boost their score to 8 plus points.

The defeat dropped Laffoon and Metz from second to fourth place with 4 points o nthe plus side of the board. Little and Runyan are in third place with plus 5.

Any one of these four teams now has a chance to make off with the $1,200 first prize to be awarded after the final 18-hole round tomorrow.

Zell Eaton and Francis Scheider, Oklahoma City, won their first match of the tournament today, defeating Ralph Guldahl, Chicago's National Open champion, and Billy Burke, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 2 up.

Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Jimmy Hines, of New York, combined ten birdies with a low ball 65 to down the faltering Tommy Armour, of Chicago, and Jimmy Thompson, of Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, 3-up.

Eaton and Schneider jumped a notch out of the cellar with 11 minus points, leaving Armour and Thomson on the tail end of the list with minus 13. Dudley and Hines are even with the board, and Guldahl and Burke are minus 2.

Scoreless Tie.

New York Giants Retain Lead by Routing Philadelphia Eagles, 21 to 0

28,000 See Leemans Lead Power Assault

Conquerors of Redskins Powerless Before New York Pros; Detroit Beats Brooklyn.

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 17.—Working smoothly behind a big, hard charging line, two sets of New York Giant backs swept to three touchdowns and a 21-0 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles today before a crowd of 28,000 at the Polo Grounds.

The Giants' home debut was impressive. Bolstered by big Ed Widseth and others, the forward wall outcharged and outmaneuvered the Eagles, who came to town fresh from a victory over the puissant Washington Redskins. Kink Richards, Hank Soar, the shifty recruits, and Ed Danowski all scored touchdowns behind savage blocking.

The crowd was hardly settled when the Giants' offense went to work. With the redoubtable Tuffy Leemans and Richards carrying the ball the home team marched 70 yards for the first score after taking the kick-off. Richards slammed off-tackle for this touchdown.

The Giants second stringers, led by Soar, had another touchdown in the next period. After gaining over land and in the air to the 11-yard line, Ed Danowski shot a pass to Soar in the end zone for the second score. The pass ended a 67-yard offensive.

The Eagles tried vainly to come back. Strong in midfield with Smuckler and Mort Mortell doing heavy duty, the attack stalled inside the 20-yard lines and the passing attack was feeble.

The Giants' final score came two minutes before the end of the game when, after Soar had dashed 36 yards to the 6-yard line and then put the ball inches from the goal line. Danowskia crashed through center.

Chicago Bears Beat Cardinals, 16-7

Chicago, Oct. 17 (AP).—The strong Chicago Bears, making a bid for their first title since 1933, won their fourth victory in as many National Professional Football League games this season by defeating the Chicago Cardinals 16 to 7 today before 23,000 fans at Wrigley Field.

Although losing their third game in seven starts, the Cardinals provided the drab game with most of its thrills, staging a spectacular last period rally which gave them their lone touchdown. With Pat Coffee throwing and Gaynell Tinsley, Doug Russell and Ace Parker receiving, the Cards worked the ball to the 1-yard marker. Parker then crashed over for the touchdown.

After four minutes of the first period, a Cardinal fumble gave the Bears Possession on their opponents' 16. Beattie Feathers rammed 11 yards on four plays and, after Bronko Nagurski had been stopped, carried the ball over. In the third period, Jack Manders speared a pass from Masterson and sprinted 50 yards to score. A few minutes later the Bears worked the ball to the 8-yard line, found the Card defense stubborn, and scored on Manders field goal.

In addition to scoring in the final period, the Cardinals thrilled the throng by advancing twice to within the Bear 10, only to encounter an irresistible defense.

Detroit Lions Swamp Dodgers by 30 to 0

Detroit, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Detroit Lions romped to their fourth victory this season today by swamping the Brooklyn Dodgers, 30 to 0.

Flashing their best attack of the season, the Lions had no difficulty in completely routing the team coached by their former mentor, George (Potsy) Clark.

Vernon Huffman, former Indiana star, made one of the longest runs in the history of professional football when he intercepted a pass thrown by Reine Nori on the Lion goal line and raced 100 yards for a score in the third period.

Long runs also produced the other Lion tallies. In the first period Ernie Caddell, on a reverse play, ran 47 yards for a touchdown. Early in the second period Regis Monahan, substitute guard, placekicked a field goal from the Dodger 20. Later in the period Detroit staged a long march that was climaxed when Bill Shepherd crashed over from the 4. Charles Hanneman, substitute Detroit end, scored the third Detroit touchdown near the end of the second period on a 50-yard run on an end around play.

Green Bay Defeats Cleveland Rams, 35-10

Cleveland, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Cleveland Rams were lambs today, led to a 35-to-10 slaughter by the Green Bay Packers in a National Professional Football League game before 12,000 fans.

Don Hutson, slippery pass receiver from Alabama, scored the first three touchdowns for Green Bay on two passes by Arnold Herber and one by Bob Monnett.

Clark Hinkle, the former Bucknell line crasher, smashed off tackle for a 20-yard scoring jaunt to the fourth touchdown, and Joe Laws walked over from the 5-yard line for the final Packer marker, climaxing a 68-yard drive in eight plays.

The Rams played their best offensive ball of the season and scored their first touchdown before a home crowd, John Drake, the scrappy former Purdue star, plunging into pay dirt from the 1-foot line in the final period.

Bob Snyder, of Ohio University, booted a 21-yard field goal for Cleveland in the second quarter.

Soccer League Opens With Two Contests

Sun Radio, Heurich's Win in Recreation Loop Matches.

The Recreation Soccer League opened the 1937-38 season yesterday with two games, Sun Radio defeating Young Democrats, 6 to 1, at Rosedale Playground, and Heurich's swamping Marlboro, 8 to 1, at Marlboro.

While winning by a large margin; the league champions were not impressive against the visiting Young Democrats, the latter being very poorly served at goal, Boggs' final counter being the best effort. Both teams went in for experimenting on a large scale, as possibly was to be anticipated in an initial start.

Heurich's had a surprisingly easy win at Marlboro, due principally to the absence—through sickness—of their regular goalkeeper, Suit, with injuries causing others to be absent. Heurich's had most of the play and scored almost at will, the Marlboro forwards being handicapped by lack of height. On the few shots given him to save, Davidson showed up well in the Heurich goal.

Two Field Goals Give Rochester Club 6-0 Victory

Boston, Oct. 17 (AP).—The educated toes of Harry Newman and Les Post today provided the Rochester Tigers with two field goals and a 6-0 triumph over the Boston Shamrocks in a American League football game before 4,000 spectators at Fenway Park.

Newman's boot, which came in the second period from the 10-yard line, with Bill O'Neill holding the ball, was completely overshadowed by Post's feat, which was accomplished from the 38-yard marker from a slight angle. O'Neill held the ball for this placement also.

Although Boston made eight first downs to Rochester's 3 and gained 120 yards by passes to Rochester's 19, the Shamrocks couldn't capitalize on their only two scoring opportunities, both of which came in the last period.

Open Doubles Event Won by Richards, Lott

Karel Kozeluh, B. Barnes Bow in Five-Set Final; Singles Today.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 17.—Vincent Richards and George Lott captured the first National Open doubles tennis championship in history today after a gruelling, five-set match with Karel Kozeluh and Bruce Barnes.

Pulling out of hole after hole, the combination was carried into three overtime sets before winning out, 1—6, 6—8, 6—3, 7—5, 9—7.

Because of the exhausting doubles match, the semifinals singles contest between Lott and Barnes, scheduled for today, was postponed until tomorrow.

Barnes defeated Richards today in a resumption of play of yesterday's match, which was called because of darkness midway in the third set after each had won one set. The scores were 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

He was scheduled to play Lott today. The winner will meet Kozeluh in the finals tomorrow.

Kozeluh won his way to the finals by defeating defending singles Champion Joe Whalen, 6—1, 6—4, 6—0. And Lott entered the semifinals by eliminating Ben Gorchakoff in the fifth set of a match also carried over until today because of darkness which forced a halt in play Saturday. The scores were 3—6, 6—1, 2—6, 6—1, 6—1.

Gyp Battles Beats Pirates At Stadium

their attack began to function. with Sammy Baugh completing four out of five passing attempts, the Redskins tied the score at 13-13. Unable to score in three downs from the 12-yard line, Baugh fired a pass to Malone under the goal posts for the touchdown, and Riley Smith's wobbly kick for the extra point was wide.

McNally's fumble of Baugh's next kick-off set the stage for the Redskins to go into the lead before the third period ended. Ben Smith recovered on the Pirates' 37 and Baugh flipped a pass to Battles for 18 yards. The Redskins had first down on the Pirates' 7, but still lacked a yard and a half after three downs. Then, a trick play brought the touchdown—Smith, faking a run, and passing to Justice across the goal line.

Malone intercepted a Pirate pass in the fourth quarter on the Redskins' 40 and then it was that Battles, on an old-fashioned end sweep, stepped over the Pirates' defensive left half, waited for a wave of blockers to dispose of Gildea on the Pirates' 34, and then ran the rest of the 60 yards unimpeded.

But Battles wasn't through. Five minutes later after the Redskins' had regained possession of the ball, he squirmed through a hole at left tackle on his own 29-yard line, skipped away from the Pirates' secondary and scored standing up on what was a 71-yard gallop. At midfield, he was clear.

The Pirates brought the score to semi-respectable figures when Karcis, three minutes before the game, ended, bulled his way for 40 yards through the line to the Redskins' 4 and then lateraled to Smith for a clever but exceedingly futile touchdown.

Big Six in two years—also went down as upsets.

Even those favorites which won had surprisingly hard going in a good many spots although Minnesota made it look easy by routing Michigan; 39-6, Dartmouth walloped Brown, 41-0; Columbia trimmed Penn, 26-6, on a brilliant solo job by Sid Luckman; Baylor proved that it must be regarded as a real Southwest Conference contender by walloping Centenary, a strong non-conference foe, 20-0, and Southern California just jogged to a 34-14 victory over Oregon State.

Yale, gaining its first triumph over Army since 1929, had a big edge but won only 15-7. Northwestern conquered Purdue, 14-7, and Alabama conquered Tennessee by the same score. Wisconsin maintained its place in the Big Ten by outpointing Iowa, 13-6, and Princeton finally wore down Chicago to win 16-7.

Farther West, California, the Coast Conference California Aggies, 14-0, and College of the Pacific, 20-0, in a double-header interlude. Montana turned back San Francisco, 13-7, to remain undefeated; Colorado whipped Brigham Young, 14-0, and Arkansas dazzled Texas with tricky passes to win, 21-10.

Louisiana State couldn't make any headway against Mississippi until the last period of their night game and finally won, 13-0. Florida whipped Sewanee, 21-0, in another Southeastern Conference game; Kentucky routed Washington and Lee, 41-6, in an intercircuit clash. In the Southern Conference North Carolina whipped Wake Forest, 28-0; South Carolina outlasted Davidson, 12-7; North Carolina State beat Virginia Tech, 13-7; Virginia Military turned back Richmond, 21-7, and the Citadel defeated Furman, 8-0.

Denver U. Loses.

Denver, Oct. 17 (AP).—Colorado College, where "Dutch" Clark was an All-America quarterback in 1928, scored the most startling upset of the Rocky Mountain Conference grid season by beating Denver University yesterday, 7 to 4.

Congressional Golfers Trounce Manor, 11 to 7

To Meet Hillendale for State Team Title; Mrs. Patterson and Wiffy Cox Win at Kenwood; Tie in Tatum Cup Play.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Congressional's champion studded links team proved the class of the Washington clubs yesterday as it advanced to the final round of the Maryland State team play with an 11-to-7 victory over a stubborn Manor team, over the neutral Columbia course.

Paced by its pro-amateur duo, Roland MacKenzie and Parker Nolan, who scored a three-point sweep over Al Treder and Tommy Bones, the victors scored heavily in four of the six matches to qualify for the finals against the Baltimore representatives, Hillendale, next Sunday on another neutral layout. Hillendale defeated Baltimore C. C. yesterday at Bonnie View, 13½ to 4½.

Harry Pitt and Bill Harvey, who defeated in Manor's sweep over Kenwood and Columbia, retained their record over the winners, Georgetown U. pair, Bill Dettweiler and Billy Shea, while Fleming and Lacey scored a clean sweep over Wenzel and McCarron for five of the losers' seven points.

Peacock and Rippy won the odd point from Gibson and Corwin while Smith and Pittman took 2 to 1 over Taylor and Meyer. McCallum and Goodwin scored the third sweep of the day, over Beavers and McCreary.

MacKenzie's par round of 70 featured the first match, the long-hitting pro and Nolan defeating Treder and Bones 1 up on the first nine and 2 and 1 on the second.

CONGRESSIONAL, 11; MANOR, 7.

Roland MacKenzie and M. Parker Nolan (Congressional) defeated Al Treder and Tommy Bones, 3 points to 0; Harry Pitt and J. W. Harvey (Manor) defeated Billy Shea and Billy Dettweiler, 2 points to 1; Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy (Congressional) defeated Ralph Gibson and Tommy Corwin, 2 points to 1.

Dr. H. L. Smith and Gene Pittman (Congressional) defeated Max Taylor and Dick Meyer, 2 points to 1; Frank Goodwin and Walter McCallum (Congressional) defeated T. N. Beavers and W. D. McCreary, 3 points to 0; Ray Fleming and Herb Lacey (Manor) defeated Bill Wenzel and Jack McCarron, 3 points to 0.

Mrs. T. B. Patteson and Wiffy Cox won the mixed Scotch foursome yesterday at Kenwood with a net 69, from a gross 83 and 14 handicap.

Mrs. M. A. Miller and R. J. Lund were second with 100-24—76, Mrs. R. E. Joyce and J. E. Hutchison third, 97-19—78.

A pair of net 71's by R. Tichnor and R. Karcher tied for the Tatum Cup at a Congressional. Tichnor shot 86-15 and Karcher, 83-12.

The latter also tied for the low gross prize with P. J. Winkler, at 83.

Maj. Francis defeated Commander Popham one up and advanced to the final round of the Army and Navy Club championship, where he will meet Commander Stevens for the title this week.

Billy Houghton, Bob Brown, Frank White and William Pendegast advanced to the semifinal round of the Capitol Club championship yesterday, all by close margins. Results in the three flights:

CAPITOL RESULTS.

First flight—Billy Houghton defeated Al Laing, 3 and 2; Bob Brown defeated Joe Keating, 3 and 1; Frank White defeated G. V. Getty, 4 and 2; William Pendegast defeated Frank Mayfield, 2 and 1.

Second flight—R. C. MacCutcheon defeated Jim Hayes, 1 up, 20 holes; Ed Fox defeated M. McDonald, 2 up; O. Kephart defeated B. Hess, 3 and 2; F. O. Roth defeated Ed Heard, 3 and 2.

The club's ringer tournament over the year long play finished a two-way tie between Joe Ballestri and Eddie Bean, each at 52. Ballestri was 27-25 and Bean's figures were reversed. Club Champion B. E. Dennell was next with 28-25—53.

Mrs. H. Mothershead won the Argyle Club women's title as she defeated the medalist and defending champion, Mrs. Betty Smith, 1 up. The new champion garnered a 2 up lead on the fifth hole and was never headed, halving the final hole in fives.

Mrs. Ethel Anderson won the first flight consolation, defeating Mrs. Paul Hagen, 4 and 3. Mrs. Ann Dudley won the second flight over Mrs. Douglas MacBride, 4 and 3, while Mrs. Ray Lawrenson won the consolation over Mrs. Wilbur Taylor by a like score.

Claws Takes Honors in Horse Show

U. S. Randle's Gelding Wins Cup in Indian Spring Event.

Moonlight over rolling acres yesterday closed the annual session of the Indian Spring Hunt Club horse show, characterized by interminable entries and a record onlooking crowd.

First honors went to Claws, including custody for his owner, U. S. Randle, of the desirable hunt cup previously won by Fenton Fadeley and Miss A. J. Carrabelli. Spectacular jumping on the part of Hunger Marcher, ridden and owned by Charles Carrico, brought the sorrel the reserve championship.

An uphill ring showed jumpers to advantage as the run of events took place at Indian Spring Valley Farm, the property of M. F. H. Marrian D. Curran of the Indian Spring Hunt, near Wheaton, Md. Judges were Mrs. Fred McCormick and Reed Thomas. Special presentations of trophies were made by Misses Eva Rabbitt, A. Carrabelli and Betty Couzens.

Peleteri Planning New Importation

Publicly announcing the importation of Scabbard, English equine, to race in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, February 22, Anthony Peleteri, owner of the Millsdale Stables, in an interview with Arch McDonald, radio commentator, last night said that he was looking forward to the racing classic as a meeting ground with War Admiral, champion 3-year-old.

Speaking of War Admiral, the Mars colt, Peleteri said he believed that Seabiscuit would emerge winner in a race with War Admiral should they meet again.

He expressed an opinion that he believed racing is on the upgrade throughout the land as evidenced by the large number of first-rate tracks and when he named his list of top-notch jockeys, he included Sonny Workman, Washington product.

Gophers Reclaim Grid Supremacy by Crushing Michigan

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—The question mark no longer is back of Minnesota's gridiron fame.

The Golden Gophers erased it themselves in re-establishing their team as the powerhouse of the Western Conference. They made their followers forget the Nebraska defeat and the skimpy margin by which they conquered Indiana in handing Michigan its second biggest trouncing in 45 years of football betwen the two universities.

The 39-to-6 defeat of the Wolverines was within one point of the all-time high set on Ferry Field two years ago. The pounding eclipsed anything Minnesota has ever done to Michigan in their historic series.

All Minnesota's six touchdowns came after constant drives, each from 40 to 61 yards. En route on these marches the Gophers clicked off a net of 389 yards to Michigan's 31; they made 15 first downs to Michigan's lonely one by rushing and two by penalties. They tried but seven passes, completing four for 131 yards.

The Gophers, however, in regaining some of their lost prestige, lost their ace halfback, Andy Uram, often their spearhead in offense, probably for the rest of the season. Uram suffered a broken left wrist in an effort to protect himself while falling after making a spectacular run.

Out of the scramble for the Big Ten championship, only four teams—Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State and Wisconsin—remain undefeated. Northwestern, the defending champion, and with the stiffest schedule of all, got past Purdue in a hair-raising encounter, winning, 14 to 7, because of the alertness of Fred Vanzo, sturdy Purple quarterback. He snatched a Purdue pass which was converted into a touchdown in the closing minutes of the game to stop a drive by the Boilermakers that might have handed the Wildcats their first setback.

Wisconsin, which had not been scored on in three games, had to come out of a tie to beat Iowa in the last period, 13 to 6, to keep its place with the four leading teams. Illinois, which got off to a splendid start by holding Notre Dame to a scoreless tie, failed to down Indiana, and dropped into the beaten class, 13 to 6.

Chicago, after outplaying Princeton in the first half to lead, 7 to 3, lost in the closing 30 minutes when the Tigers turned on the power.

The most notable conference game coming up next Saturday will be the engagement between Northwestern and Ohio State at Columbus. Michigan will invade Iowa City to meet Iowa, while Wisconsin battles Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh, and Indiana plays Cincinnati. Minnesota, Chicago, Illinois and Purdue will be resting.

Baltimore Pros Down Celtics, 14-0

Baltimore, Oct. 17 (AP).—Some 2,000 fans cheered the Professional Dixie League football team today as it slashed into the heavier Alexandria team and emerged with a 14-0 victory. Monk Campbell passed 30 yards to Joe Uvanni, who ran another 35 for Batlimore's first touchdown. Ted Wright made the second on a 15-yard run.

Children's Theater Opens Season at National in 'Daddy Long-Legs.'

"DADDY LONG-LEGS." The Children's Theater of New York presents the play in three acts, dramatized from the book by Jean Webster, and directed by Clare Tree Major. Costumes by Marian DePew; settings by Irving Morrow. Reviewed Saturday morning at the National Theater by Elinor T. Evans.

To the evident delight of the large junior audience in attendance at the National Theater Saturday morning, the Children's Theater of New York launched its sixth season in Washington with the presentation of "Daddy Long Legs," the play based on Jean Webster's widely read children's classic. The dramatization of the book was done by Clare Tree Major, niece of the famous Ellen Tree, and one-time member of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's company. Miss Major, who is a founder of this organization, has also directed the production with a sure touch, keeping it an even tempo and pace.

The story relates to the trials and tribulations of Judy Abbott, who is one of infinitesimal cogs in that vast machine known as an "orphan asylum." Having made the best of her institutional environment for her 16 years of existence, she is finally emancipated by a trustee and given the longed-for opportunity for educational advancement elsewhere. This trustee, whom she names Daddy Long-Legs, because of his fleeting, elongated shadow seen on a wall, proves to be not the kindly, bald-headed old philanthropist of her imaginings, but a young and charming man quite suitable for romantic attachment, much to the satisfaction of Judy, as well as of her sympathizers on the other side of the footlights.

Played by Competent Cast.

Katherine Minehart, as Judy, played with conviction and assurance, her lighter moments being particularly pleasing. Her voice has a fine timbre. "Daddy Long-Legs," or Jervis Pendleton, to use his more formal cognomen, was portrayed by Wendell Whitten, also the possessor of a good vocal equipment. His was a journeyman piece of acting, and one feels that more grown-ups should be given a chance to witness his work in the not-too-distant future. Susanne Rooney was effective as the acidulous Mrs. Lippett, matron of the home, and Donald Cornell, as the ragamuffin Freddie, minus some molars, but plus ebullient spirits, evoked a good share of laughs. The other members of the cast, Lucille Warrington, Anne Congrieve and Ernest Walling, performed acceptably.

There is a suspicion that some doubling was done in a number of scenes, but this being the case, the actors deserve even more commendation for their versatility.

The settings were adequate and in good taste, but something should be done to erect a masking piece behind the entrances and thus obviate the distraction of performers off-set awaiting cues, and the sight of the Argus-eyed fireman, who is always a necessary part of backstage accoutrements.

Little

"THE WANDERING JEW." Olympic Pictures filmization of the play by E. Temple Thurston, starring Conrad Veidt, with Marie Ney, Basil Gill, Cicely Oates, Bertram Wallis, Hector Abbas, Jack Livesay, Joan Maude, Peggy Ashcroft, Felix Aylmer, Ivor Barnard, Stafford Hilliard and Robert Gilbert. Musical score by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld. Directed by Maurice Elvey. Reviewed at the Little Theater Sunday afternoon by Elinor T. Evans.

Entertainment of merit is on the cinema menu at the Little Theater which is presenting the British production of "The Wandering Jew," starring Conrad Veidt. This is another deviation from the Little's usual policy of revivals, marking the initial showing of the film in Washington.

Adapted from the well known play by the late E. Temple Thurston, who had based it on the novel of Eugene Sue, the photoplay is a kaleidoscopic panorama of magnificence and beauty, studded with vignettes of splendid characterization. Maurice Elvey in his direction has handled the mob scenes with finish and precision, and the musical accompaniment which aids in the film's evolution was under the baton of Hugo Riesenfeld.

The drama embraces four episodes in the life of Amadeus, the wandering Jew, and opens in Palestine during the time of the crucifixion of the Nazarene. Fancying himself affronted at the counsel given by the Savior, the Jew spits on him, and by reason of his act is condemned to eternal wandering on the earth until the Messiah should give him release.

The next chapter finds the Jew jousting the tournaments during the Crusades, in the guise of a mysterious armored knight, who emerges victorious from all conflict. The scene of the massed army of Crusaders in uniform, kneeling in celebration of mass and chanting in unison, is one of the outstanding moments in the entire production.

Tried Again for Heresy.

Again the Jew returns as a wealthy merchant in Palermo, still afraid of the Cross and yet deathless. In this existence he loses his beloved son to death, and his lovely wife to the faith he shuns, and lives in loneliness until he is seen again in Spain during the Inquisition. Practicing the art of healing the sick under the very shadow of the cross, he is called to minister to the injured foot of a woman of the streets, who ironically enough had been run down by a carriage conveying an emissary of the church. Through his kindliness and wisdom, she relinquishes her former life and likens herself to the Magdalen, who followed her Master. This heresy reaches the ears of the inquisitors, who speedily bring the two to trial and sentence the Jew to the fires of the stake. The faggots are lighted around him, but a storm and wind consume them and the Jew is unharmed. But the time for his redemption has come at long last, and he dies surrounded by a strong heavenly light symbolic of his Divine release.

Conrad Veidt, as the Jew, gives a moving and powerful performance, playing each moment with consummate artistry. His characterization marks another brilliant gem in his collection of shadow portraits. Peggy Ashcroft, seen briefly as the penitent harlot, demonstrates the ability which won her a place on the Broadway stage this past season, enacting her few moments with sympathy and restraint. Other members of the ensemble who acquit themselves with credit were Anne Gorey, Joan Maude, Felix Aylmer, Hechtor Abbas and John Stuart.

The subsidiaries which complete the bill are a travelogue of Jerusalem, and a Technicolor musical narration of the glamour of life in the Scottish Highlanders' regiment.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Motion Picture's Musical Art Is Challenged By Youthful Genius of the Stradivarius and Bow

Master Yehudi Menuhin 'Shocked and Bewildered' by Offer to Appear in the Films; Abbreviated Subscription Season Still Open; Civic Theater Is One Year Old; F. B. I. Theater Group Is Superstitious.

THERE ARE, it seems, two sides to every question.

Much has been claimed of late for the perfection with which the celluloid sound track now is able to reproduce great music for its screen audiences. It has been pointed out, with considerable tangible proof of the sound basis of the contention, that the cinema at last is able to capture all of the delicate shadings, nuances and harmonic richness of the world's foremost compositions for both voice and instruments. In the light of accomplishments already achieved in this direction, there has not been any considerable amount of argument on the subject. But now there is. A slightly bitter dissenter from the majority view has sprung up in Hollywood and, either individually or by parental proxy, has become vocal.

BELL.

Late last week Master Yehudi Menuhin, the youthful prodigy of the violin, professed to be "shocked and bewildered" at the suggestion that he bow his Stradivarius for the sound screen. His sensitively artistic reactions were reciprocated in full by the film colony.

"Between Yehudi Menuhin's musical art and Hollywood, as it is constituted today, there is an abyss that cannot be bridged," said a statement from Yehudi's father, explaining why the concert violinist snubbed a movie offer. "The message of the masters of music is completely delivered through the medium of the talent of genius, plus a fiddle, strings and a bow. And no acting, dancing or dressing, by male or female partners, is called for to illustrate, elucidate or convey the immortal sonatas, concertos or symphonies. Menuhin will always remain alone." In view of all the circumstances, one begins to suspect the utter truth of that last statement.

Boris Morros, one of the West Coast's more eminent musical directors, takes the philosophical view that, "How Menuhin feels about appearing in pictures is, of course, his own affair. His belief that good music does not need 'dressing up' merely represents a difference of opinion. If the young maestro is so concerned about the 'prostitution' of art on the screen, he might well make a major contribution to his own art by elevating the art of the films by appearing in them himself."

In the meantime, it is impossible to escape the fact that it is a doubtful compliment Master Yehudi and his paternal mentor have paid such of their fellow artists in music's higher realm as Leopold Stokowski, Beniamino Gigli, Giovanni Martinelli, Kirsten Flagstad, Werner Janssen, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Grace Moore and many others who might be named.

Another reminder is tossed out to those still faithful in their adherence to the traditional theater that it still is possible to become subscribers to four of the six plays comprising the subscription season sponsored by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington. Beginning this week, a four-play subscription season becomes available, both "Madame Bovary" and "Amphitryon 38" having been written off the books. First of the remaining two-thirds of the original season will be "Tovarich," booked for the National the week of Monday, November 1, with Marta Abba and the New York cast. Following this comedy hit of last season on Broadway will come three others, one of which definitely will be "Yes, My Darling Daughter." The other two, both Guild productions, offer such possibilities as Sidney Howard's "Ghost of Yankee Doodle," S. N. Behrman's "Wine of Choice" or Ben Hecht's "To Quito and Back." New series patrons will be adding their names to a list that already includes more than 5,400 Washington subscribers. This season, incidentally, marks the observance of the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Theater Guild, an outgrowth of the old Washington Square Players in New York.

Speaking of anniversaries, when the Washington Civic Theater opens its second season at the Wardman Park Playhouse, with "Excursion" on this Wednesday evening, it will be just one year, less a day, since the Civic celebrated its first first-night in the same handsome little theater.

But it will be a very different opening night this October 20 from that of October 21, 1936. Then the Civic Theater was completely unknown and unproved to the Capital. When the curtains parted on that beautiful stage set William Girvan had designed for "Caesar and Cleopatra," there were lumps in throats and high hopes and dark fears in many Civic hearts. When the final curtains closed, they felt they had won their gamble—and so did the audience.

This October 20, the opening curtain will reveal a different scene and a contrasting play, staged by a new and exciting director, F. Cowles Strickland, and the audience will be expecting—not merely hoping for—an able production.

The Civic will be surer of itself, more confident, more relaxed, for it has played to 15,000 audience members now, and it has paid its way for a year, during which it has dared all sorts of seemingly impossible things, and more often than not won out.

It is a promising portent to note that the "Excursion" boat sets for this year's inaugural were designed and executed by the same Mr. Girvan who did so well by the Shaw play last October.

Wednesday night bids fair to be what is generally referred to as "gala"—with the first "a" long or not, as you wish.

The fine heritage handed down by a father who, during a lifetime of distinguished contributions to the stage, never spoke an offensive word or performed a questionable act, is being given delightful expression by Fred Stone's daughter Dorothy and her husband, Charles Collins, on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater this week in their refreshingly chaste interval of songs and dances. Here is a concrete demonstration that even in this day of gyrating "Big Apples" and Harlemesque rhythms the "hot-cha" school of entertainment is not necessarily the best. I suggest that all admirers of Fred Stone's unwavering insistence upon unsmirched diversion in the theater attend the Capitol this week and discover for themselves how handsomely his daughter and son-in-law are preserving an admirable family tradition.

The F. B. I. Theater Group, winners of the 1935 One-Act Play Tournament, and among the entrants in tomorrow night's preliminary contest in the 1937 tournament in Roosevelt High School Auditorium, are not aloof from the legendary superstitions of the theater.

Their winning play in 1935 was "A Game of Chess," requiring the ringing of a bell at a climacteric point in the action. By an odd chance, "The Hundredth Trick," by Beulah Marie Dix, in which they will appear this year, also requires the ringing of a bell at a similar juncture. So the F. B. I. actors are using the same bell—as a "lucky piece."

A few million aggressive little pulmonary bugs having made it appear the part of discretion for this desk to miss the preview screenings of "The Awful Truth" and "The Wandering Jew," Saturday afternoon and night, respectively, the hope is now entertained that a thoroughly organized counterattack against their bronchial assault will make it possible to take an advance squint at "The Prisoner of Zenda," come 1:30 by the clock tomorrow afternoon. Eight rotogravure pages of expository pictures and text—each about the size of a 24-sheet—lead to the suspicion that "Zenda," in its latest gelatin manifestation, possesses production values that few pictures before it have been able to boast. David O. Selznick, the producer, seems to have given this one what are popularly known as "the works." More of this Wednesday morning, I am afraid—unless the bugs bring up new re-enforcements and lay down another creeping barrage.

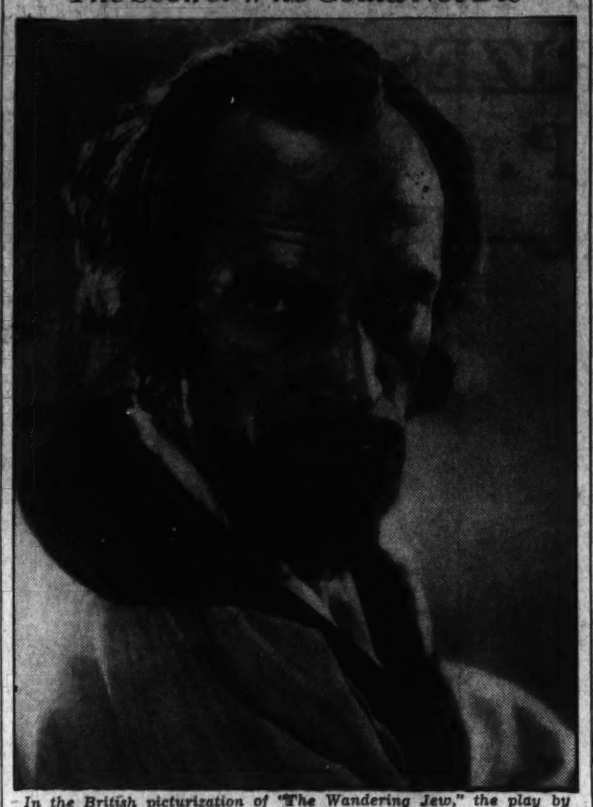
The Scoffer Who Could Not Die



In the British picturization of "The Wandering Jew," the play by E. Temple Thurston, the title role is played by that distinguished continental actor, Conrad Veidt. Mr. Veidt is pictured above in the character of the man who spat upon The Christ, bearing the cross up Calvary, and was condemned to live until the second coming of The Redeemer. "The Wandering Jew" is being presented for the first time in Washington on the screen of the Little Theater this week.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 17.—Mutterings: Judged by their divorce records, nine-tenths of all the males in Hollywood are capable of "extreme cruelty" at times. Wondering muse: If Tyrone Power, as a star, is so irresistible, why did all the girls give him the go-by when he was an unsuccessful bit player? Grace Moore's threat to sue a fan magazine that carried an unflattering story about her makes me wonder what she would do if the author had written what he really thought. Secret ambition: To be a 20-year-old leading man and play opposite Olympe Bradna in love scenes.

GRACE MOORE.

Among Hollywood's lesser marvels: The ability of Anita Louise to lose her temper—and still wear that sweetness-and-light expression. Growl: Does Martha Raye have to do that bouncing act every time she sings a hot song? Suggestion to theater owners: Why not reserve a special section for the human gadflies who like to rustle paper candy bags during the showing of a feature? Nervous Itch: To pull Bob Burns' bazooka apart and see if that whiskey funnel really helps.

DIABOLICAL THOUGHT: To sell identical evening gowns to each one of Hollywood's "best-dressed" women, invite them all to the same party—and stand by to watch the hostilities. Frantic Urge: To tell Charles Bickford that his continual, supercilious panning of pictures and picture people is the most boresome act in Hollywood. Height of something or other: Those perfumed earrings that Olivia de Haviland wears. A fleeting impression of Joan and Franchot at a recent premiere: A shapely belle, a mellow Tone—and a lot of clappers.

The best show in Hollywood is staged twice a year—on the first shooting day of each Cecil B. De Mille picture. C. B., a glutton for publicity, invites the world to watch—and that part of the world within driving distance of Hollywood obligingly turns out to see the pyrotechnics. Clad in the puttee that most directors long ago discarded, De Mille dominates the show. He shouts sarcastic comment through his megaphone, flays his actors with caustic wit that invariably brings a shout of laughter from the crowd. The act goes off so smoothly that few people in the audience realize it is predesigned and rehearsed. Everyone—even the most disillusioned Hollywood veterans—has a swell time—and the next day's headlines balloon the name of the one director whose slogan has always been "Say anything you like about me—but use my name." Criticize the De Mille flare for exhibitionism if you will—but the policy pays dividends. Of all the Hollywood directors, he is the only one recognized by the average fan.

Lunched with Irene Dunne, who has toiled all summer while most of Hollywood's famed ones vacationed. I asked her why she had not commandeered enough time for a jaunt to the mountains or the beach—and had my answer when she conducted me to the set where she is working. Outside, it was hotter than the hinges of Hades; inside, thanks to the refrigeration system used, the air had a late fall chill. Irene, smart girl, will take her vacation sometime in November.

The silliest publicity blurb of the week concerns John Barrymore. It quotes him as saying that the atmosphere of Hollywood favors domestic quiet and bliss—that it is the stage which invariably breaks up the marriages of actors. Coming from an Edward G. Robinson, an Edward Arnold or a Jean Hersholt—all of whom have remained happily married in Filmtown—such a statement might be swallowed as a gem of biased philosophy—but from Caliban, still salving the wounds received in his matrimonial battles with Ariel, it is a laugh.

Gayety

"JOLIES BERGERE." James J. Lake presents the musical production in two acts and 22 scenes, featuring Valerie Parks and Bob Fergueson, supported by Mary Murray, Franklyn Hopkins, Wen Miller, Margie France, George Lewis, and Crystal Cook. Dance numbers produced by Frank Bryant; staged by Mr. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Ted Camden, BCAA.

Sparkling is the word for Jimmy Lake's current offering. It sparkles in every department—singing, dancing, comedy, costumes, sets. Principal contributors to the coruscation are Valerie Parks and Bob Fergueson, both newcomers to the talent array that travels about Mr. Hirst's burlesque circuit. Working in a manner which combines the salient features of Corio and Wausau styles, blonde and truly beautiful Miss Parks chalks up a most creditable tally with the seat lessees. She appears twice during the first act, a rarity for the star, and offers a clever fan number in the introductory spot.

With the next subject of consideration being Mr. Fergueson, it becomes the pleasing task to report that one of the funniest of funny men is playing the Gayety this week. He possesses the knack of brushing off old, familiar scenes and making them impress as more amusing than when they were new, long, long ago. This is Fergueson's first trip, but those who see him will be waiting eagerly for the wheel to revolve around to his spoke again. George Lewis is the other comedian, and his skits also are certain mirth-provokers. Franklin Hopkins, doubling as singer (and an able one), and Wen Miller render capable abetting.

Crystal Cook, who gets upon her toes and stays there, adds much to the merit of the show's terpsichorean aspect. Her rope-skipping toe tap stage. Other things worth while are stage. Other things worthwhile are Margie France, singer; Mary Murray, secondary display artiste, and one of the best-trained and best-looking lines to come through this season. Jimmy Lake need offer no apology for "Jolies Bergere." It is a winner at any distance.

Yeggs Balked In Theaters Rob School of $8

Robbers opened the safe in the Elliott Junior High School early yesterday but failed in attempts to open safes in the Avalon and Ambassador theaters. Their loot was $8.

Police believe the safecrackers to be members of the same gang because of similarity in methods used.

Reason could be discerned for their attacks on the theater strongboxes, but police were at a loss to explain their motive for rifling the safe in a junior high school.

Mrs. Agnes I. Kinnear, principal of the school, told police the intruders gained entrance by forcing a door. The safe had been chiselled open, apparently by amateurs, Precinct Detective Edgar Scott, of the Ninth Precinct stated.

The money taken, $8 in quarters, was the monthly dues of the parent-teachers association, Mrs. Kinnear said.

Lamar Keen, manager of the Avalon Theater, 5612 Connecticut avenue northwest, told police an attempt had been made to break into the safe in the theater office but that the thieves were unsuccessful. The combination had been knocked off but nothing apparently had been taken.

The second attempt was reported by Robert Etris, manager of the Ambassador Theater, who told police the theater had been entered between 11:30 p. m. Saturday and 8 a. m. yesterday by breaking a rear door. The combination was knocked off the strongbox, but the thieves were unable to gain entrance.

Meanwhile, police were seeking an armed bandit who held up Sophia Jones, proprietor of a lunchroom at Ninth and L streets northwest, early yesterday and robbed her of $5.

The woman said the robber entered and asked for a package of cigarettes. When she turned to get them he drew a gun and took the money.

Property valued at more than $1,000 was stolen by sneak thieves in a series of housebreakings over the week-end.

Frank S. Bernard, 1410 Manchester lane northwest, said his yacht, anchored at the floodgate boathouse, had been ransacked and a camera and two pair of field glasses worth $650 stolen.

School Safe Yields Lean Pickings

The yegg with more originality than logic who cracked this safe at Elliott Junior High School over the week-end got but $8 for his labor. Detective Edgar J. Scott, of No. 9 Precinct, inspects the damage.

U. S. Leaflet to Teach Small Towns to Play

Community programs for leisure-time activities are described in a publication to be issued today by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor under the title, "Development of a Leisure-Time Program in Small Cities and Towns." Ella Gardner, former recreational specialist on the bureau's staff, is author of the 13-page booklet.

To assist communities to measure adequacy of provisions for recreation, a few standards have been set up relating to leadership of the leisure-time program, playground areas for children of different age groups, playground supervision, game courts and playground equipment and other recreational facilities.

Death of Survivor Seals Mine Tragedy

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 17 (AP). The only lips that ever could have told the tragic true story of Saturday's explosion in Mulga mine were sealed today by the death of Ivan Fox which brought the catastrophe's toll to 34 lives.

Fox succumbed in a Bessemer hospital, more than 24 hours after the coal gas blast 4 miles from the mine's entrance brought instant death to 33 fellow-miners, 13 other white men and 20 Negroes.

Man in Iron Lung Going From Chicago to Miami

Chicago, Oct. 17 (AP).—Medicine's Marco Polo completed plans today to run the mileage on his respirator past the 10,000-mile mark. Fred B. Snite, jr., smiling victim of infantile paralysis, arranged to leave tomorrow for Miami Beach, Fla., in the "iron lung" that has kept him alive for 18½ months.

Encased in the respirator, he was borne 9,300 miles by train, truck and ship from Peiping, China, to Chicago, last summer.

On the Air Today

A full hour of representative works of Palestrina, Corelli and others of the "great" in Italian music will be heard in an International Broadcasting Union program from Rome, by short wave, WMAL, at 3. Works only of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

• • • •

Two new programs come to Washington listeners today. At 3:30 "Jenny Peabody," a new serial drama, with Miss Mento Everitt, begins at WJSV. At 9, WMAL, a series of symphonic hours with distinctly popular appeal offers the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy. W. M. Kiplinger, of Washington, will be heard each week on timely topics.

• • • •

Justice Owen J. Roberts will be heard at 9:30, WRC, when the University of Pennsylvania celebrates its bicentennial. From Philadelphia. Also to be heard: President Gates, of the university, and Thomas I. Parkinson and Robert T. McCracken.

• • • •

President Roosevelt launches the 1937 Community Mobilization for Human Needs tonight at 10:30 (all four stations). He speaks from Hyde Park. The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, Otto Klemperer conducting, also participates.

• • • •

Yasha Davidoff, basso, sings "Old Man River" as the feature of "Impressions," WOL, at 11:30. Milton Katims directs the orchestra in Weinberger, Strauss and Lacombe selections. Dorothy Sandlin, soprano, also is presented.

Roosevelt and Miss Perkins Confer as Leaders Head Here for Parley.

He greeted the President on the front porch of the ivy-covered stone and stucco house as the latter returned from services at St. James Episcopal Church with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt, who lives on an adjoining estate.

The family heard two references to the cause of the world peace in the hour's services at the little village church.

One quotation read from the Psalms of David appeared particularly significant to some in the congregation: "I labour for peace; but when I speak unto them thereof they make them ready to battle."

Near the end of the sermon the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, who had been emphasizing the need for constructive co-operative endeavor, declared the world was in chaos today because the people lacked confidence and faith in the "values" of peace.

C. I. O. Position Clear.

The basis on which the two labor juggernauts can be merged to provide a single organization of more than 7,000,000 members must, it was clear, provide for both craft organization, as in the A. F. of L., and organization by industries, the basic principle of the C. I. O.

Difficulty of fixing the limits for each form of unionization in a merged organization is emphasized by the numerous cases in which A. F. of L. unions might have to be swallowed up in C. I. O. unions, or the latter groups lose considerable of their strength through sharing an industry with craft unions.

That the C. I. O. will not give up its principle in this regard is emphasized in its declaration proposing a conference with the rival group:

"The C. I. O. has proved conclusively during the past two years that its basic policies are essential for the organization of labor." It said further that "the C. I. O. will be the instrumentality whereby labor will achieve industrial and political democracy."

The A. F. of L., on the other hand, has insisted that the peace meeting be held without any advance stipulations or commitments of any kind.

Suggestoins that the C. I. O. unions be taken into the federation as a department, similar to the Metal Trades Department and others, to be known as the Industrial Organization Department, it was conceded would hardly solve the problem in itself. The department would be larger in membership, and stronger, than all the rest of the federation combined, and would be in a position to dominate the entire A. F. of L. There still would remain main points of conflict on jurisdiction between the industrial and the craft unions.

Of interest, meanwhile, in the general labor situation, was appointment by Secretary Perkins of the Federal Committee on Apprentice Training, as a part of "plans to provide a sufficient number of highly skilled workers to supply the country's growing needs and to guarantee a thorough trade preparation for apprentices."

Since the first of the year there have been numerous complaints from various sections of shortages of skilled workers, a situation largely attributed to virtual suspension of the training of apprentices in depression years.

Mrs. Beyer Heads Group.

The committee is to be composed of Mrs. Clara M. Beyer, assistant director, division of labor statistics of the Department of Labor, chairman; C. R. Dooley, industrial relations manager of Socony Vacuum Oil Co., representing employers; John P. Frey, president of the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department, representing employes; Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, to represent educators, and Dr. Mary H. S. Hayes, director of guidance and placement of the National Youth Administration.

The committee was first organized in 1934 to safeguard the interests of apprentices under NRA codes, but later became a part of the NYA. The last session of Congress passed a law making it a permanent agency of the Labor Department.

To prevent "overcrowding" in any trade, Miss Perkins said, applicants for apprenticeships will be guided into occupations where opportunities are growing and where there are definite indications of a shortage. She said the Federal committee "must exercise constant, constructive leadership, carry on negotiations between employers, organizations and organized labor, direct needed research and act as a clearing house on matters of apprenticeship, so that national, State and local employer and labor organizations and individuals may benefit from the experience of similar groups in other sections of the country."

2 Are Held in Death After Fight, Stabbing

Two men were held at the Ninth Precinct station last night in connection with the death yesterday of Gilbert I. Hawkins, colored, 29, of 663 Fourth street northeast.

Hawkins was stabbed in the heart in an altercation at his home. He was pronounced dead upon his arrival at Casualty Hospital. Police took into Custody James Broom, 29, and William Johnson, 37, both colored, who were said to be in the home at the time of the fight.

Novena for St. Jude Will Open Wednesday

The St. Jude Thaddeus novena will open in the Church of the Immaculate Conception Wednesday, conducted by the Rev. Cletus Mulhyk, C. P., who will preach each Monday mass at 12:15 p. m. for five minutes and again at 7:30 p. m.

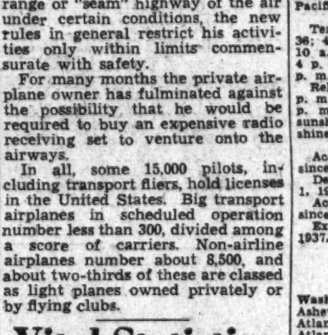
Music will be under direction of Prof. Harry Wheaton Howard, with the girls of the academy presenting the program.

Contract Bridge

Why Guess?

It is a curious fact that most players think very highly of their card playing, even though they do not mind admitting that their bidding is "not perfect." I say "curious" because my own experience among players of every rank has proved the direct contrary to be true. In other words, there is no doubt in my mind that the general standard of bidding, whatever it is, is much higher than the standard of play. One hand or, for that matter, a hundred hands proves nothing, but the one described today at least illustrates my point. My considered opinion is that the average player would arrive at the correct contract, but I am not nearly so sure that the same player would fulfill it, except perhaps through a lucky guess.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	2 ◇
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

South was "slam-minded" the moment he heard North's club raise. But he rightly felt that with a diamond opening, dictated by East's overcall, a slam would not be a good gamble unless he could count on the spade Ace in the North hand. Once that card was discovered by means of the four spade asking bid, a slam became a sound investment.

West opened his top diamond, dummy played low, and the Ace won. A glance disclosed that success depended on avoiding the loss of a spade in addition to the diamond loss which seemed unavoidable. A successful spade finesse would clinch matters, but this declarer was not fond of two-way guesses. He determined to avoid the guess if possible. He cashed the heart Ace and led two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. He then ruffed the nine of hearts. Returning to dummy with a trump, he led the heart Queen and, when East covered, nonchalantly tossed on his losing diamond.

The sheer simplicity and beauty of this play should be apparent. East had been put on lead and would be forced to make a return that would eliminate any spade guess. If East had a fourth heart and chose to lead it, declarer could discard a spade in one hand while ruffing in the other. If East chose to return the King of diamonds (located on his bid and on the original lead), declared could ruff and dummy's Queen would be established. On a low diamond lead, declarer could, of course win with the Queen. Finally, a spade return by East would take the guess out of the finessing situation.

Now, dear reader, be truthful! If you were playing this hand, wouldn't you just make a wild guess for the spade Queeen, and wouldn't you be apt to place that card in East's hand, with the diamond bid?

flying operations by the extent of navigational aids, Government and airlines rules, weather and the power and flying range of individual airplanes.

The changes in the rules afford the light plane operator a good deal more latitude of operation than he has enjoyed in the past over the Nation's 22,000 miles of airway systems. Whereas the light plane owner without a radio-receiving set has had to fly to one side of the radio range or "seam" highway of the air under certain conditions, the new rules in general restrict his activities only within limits commensurate with safety.

For many months the private airplane owner has fulminated against the possibility that he would be required to buy an expensive radio receiving set to venture onto the airways.

In all, some 15,000 pilots, including transport fliers, hold licenses in the United States. Big transport airplanes in scheduled operation number less than 300, divided among a score of carriers. Non-airline airplanes number about 8,500, and about two-thirds of these are classed as light planes owned privately or by flying clubs.

Steel Output Drops in Week To 63 Per Cent

But Stable Prices for First 1938 Quarter Is Held Favorable Factor.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Announcement late last week by the leading steel and wire producers of extension of prices on most products through first quarter of 1938 is expected to have a favorable effect and to stabilize buying by clarifying the market for that period. Independent steelmakers are taking similar action. The announcement is qualified by the proviso that prices are subject to changes in freight rates, says Steel.

Call for a special session of Congress is an unsettling factor, in view of the program for further legislation on hours and wages and other matters in which industry has a deep interest. On the other hand, rumors are current of a considerable rearmament program which would tend to increase demand for steel.

Much interest is aroused by the inquiry of the Government for bids on 5,000 to 8,000 tons of ferromanganese of 68 to 72 per cent manganese and an alternate of 15,000 to 24,000 tons of manganese ore of 40 per cent manganese. The ferromanganese specification is for material 10 points below the standard grade and the manganese content of the ore is low, enabling domestic producers to compete. However, this grade of ore is not suited to production of standard ferromanganese.

Interest in Bids.

This proposed purchase is believed to be for the purpose of establishing a backlog for Government use in case of a runaway market, such as prevailed during the World War. Bids will be opened October 29 and the degree of participation by domestic producers is a matter of interest.

Continued shortening of steelworks production last week brought the national operating rate down 3 points, to 63 per cent of capacity. Chicago made the greatest recession, dropping 8 points, to 57 per cent. Eastern Pennsylvania mills dropped 4.5 points, to 51 per cent; Pittsburgh, 2 points, to 60; Youngstown, 2 points, to 58; Buffalo, 2.5, to 67.5, and Birmingham, 7 to 70. Cleveland rose 5 points, to 68 per cent, and New England, 5, to 70 per cent. Unchanged conditions prevailed at Wheeling, at 74; Detroit, 98; Cincinnati, 70, and St. Louis, 60 per cent.

With ingot production for nine months only 2 per cent below the same months of 1929, an average rate of about 69 per cent of capacity for the remaining three months will be required to equal the record of that year. As the final quarter of 1929 showed a steep decline from earlier months, a new record this year is possible in spite of the present low production rate.

Chain Store Sales Recover Lost Ground

New York, Oct. 17.—Chain store trade in September recovered all the ground lost in the previous month and more, pushing the total volume for the month into a new high level, according to the current review by Chain Store Age.

The index of September sales of 20 leading chain organizations advanced to 116.0 of the 1929-1931 average for the month taken as 100, from 113.2 in August. The index for September, 1936, was 110.0.

Baby Bond Sales Soon to Pass Billion

Treasury officials estimated yesterday that sales of "baby bonds" will be over the billion-dollar mark by end of the year.

Through last week purchasers of these bonds had put $944,531,732 into the Treasury, and sales are running far ahead of last year. The government began offering the bonds of $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 denominatoins in March, 1935.

President and Bankers See Contrary Reasons for Stock Market Slump.

New York, Oct. 17.—Two significant events served last week to throw a more powerful light on the decline in securities prices, a decline which continued with little interruption to new low levels, the lowest in two years for stocks.

One was the radio address of President Roosevelt Tuesday night, defending his call for an extra session of Congress in November, outlining the legislation he hoped to have enacted and belittling the influence upon business and the markets of the threat of further legislation of the type proposed. The additional lighting was the series of addresses on the position made by prominent bankers and economists in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Bankers Association and as a climax, the address in another place delivered by Chairman Aldrich of the Chase National Bank.

Uncovering the Sores.

What the effect of Mr. Aldrich's speech may ultimately be on Government regulation is a question, but by pointing out the numerous sore spots that may well develop into incurable cancers the banker has done a real service. Mr. Aldrich rejected the idea that the stock decline, which began last spring, either reflected or forecast a business recession. He insisted that only in the last few weeks have any signs of a business setback been seen and that the weakness developed because business minds were upset by the decline in securities.

Tha decline, in Mr. Aldrich's view, was generated by a number of elements, all under Government control, including the capital gains tax, credit and margin tinkering, the absurd restrictions on market operations by informed people (people holding directorial or official positions with corporations), and the myriad annoyances of the SEC. It is perhaps less beneficial to examine at this time the merit of the conflicting opinions on what lay back of the beginning of business recession than to study the prospects.

Placing the Blame.

All are now agreed that some recession, if only moderate, is taking place in business, and whether of the Aldrich school or some other, they lay the causes at the door of the Government. If it has not been stock market meddling, it has been prices and wages, credit juggling, the unsound policies with regard to the unbalanced budget, taxation, and the all around uncertainty over whether profits can be retained if made. The important point is that the future business is in the hands of the economic managers at Washington. They can give the country about what they wish to give it, for a while at least.

Unfortunately, so far as the Chief Executive is concerned, as a defense against a possible charge that he is to blame for the market decline and the accompanying, or resulting business slump, he is refusing to see in it anything more than a malicious conspiracy among Wall Street financial sharks and economic royalists to discredit his administration. There is a familiar sound about all that, reminiscent of 1929-32. It is nevertheless vouched for by usually well-informed people that in the present case the President has rejected the suggestions of his advisers that it is high time policy be tempered to the chill winds of the decline in the stock market.

Expensive Malice.

President Roosevelt, it is said, has replied to that by refusing to concede that business is in any danger, to begin with, and that in any case the fault lies in Wall Street. Color is given to those reports by the fact that the President has gone ahead and called a special session of Congress at which further restrictive legislation will be pressed. In his radio address last week he said by implication that if markets were frightened by the prospect they had no reason to be.

The only hope lies in Congress, which may contain enough sense by this time to see the danger involved and which may have at least some members who will refuse to believe that a decline of $18,000,000,000 — as estimated by a leading authority last week—in the securities market since last spring represents a loss taken by economic royalists purely for the sport of embarrassing the administration.

Meanwhile it will be some time before the full influence of the market break will be felt. Orders now are being held up or canceled; their effect on industrial production will show later. Is the administration unmindful of that, or is it indeed complacent over the prospect of having to "take over" complete control and possibly operation of industry, along the line of which most legislation in the past few years has been moving?

Government Buys 1,265,040 Doz. Eggs

The Federal Government spent about $285,000 last week buying 1,265,040 dozen eggs, officials said, in an effort to improve prices received by farmers.

Yesterday, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration said, 105 carloads of eggs had been purchased throughout the United States, chiefly at storage centers, at an average price of about 22½ cents a dozen. The eggs will be turned over to State agencies for free distribution to relief clients.

Third Quarter Profits 7.5% Over Year Ago

First 21 Corporations to Make Returns Report Total of $57,829,629.

New York, Oct. 17.—Third quarter profits of the first 21 corporations to report totaled $57,829,629, an increase of approximately 7.5 per cent from the $53,811,285 in the third quarter of the preceding year. The bulk of these figures consists of $44,687,274, which was the profit of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., compared with $43,655,142 a year ago.

Twenty-nine companies showed total income in the nine months ended September 30 of $184,799,215, up 21.1 per cent over the $152,687,491 in the corresponding months of 1936.

The reports on the whole have been fairly good, but a definite trend cannot be predicted as hardly any of the larger firms have shown their quarter and nine months figures.

Twenty industrial organizations reported total profits in the third quarter of $13,142,355, a gain of 29.4 per cent above the $10,156,143 in the third quarter last year, and for the nine-month period 27 had a combined total of $51,401,014. This is about 38.7 per cent higher than the first nine months of the preceding year.

Union Oil of California and Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass were the leading industrial concerns reporting and the estimated profit of the former for the first nine months was the best since 1929. Other important industrials included General Baking, Underwood Elliott-Fisher, Harbison Walker Refractories, Sharon Steel, Continental Baking, Budd Manufacturing, New York Air Brake, Transue & Williams, which showed a loss for the quarter; United Fruit, Bowman-Biltmore Hotels and Rustless Iron and Steel.

Northern Indiana Public Service was the only other utility besides American Telephone.

Express Shipments 6.19% Over Year Ago

New York, Oct. 17.—The Railway Express Agency handled 10,630,430 shipments during August, an increase of 619,742 shipments or 6.19 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, K. N. Merritt, general sales manager, reported today.

This August increase marked the forty-fourth consecutive month in Railway Express gains in the number of shipments carried throughout the country.

Average Tobacco Prices.

New York, Oct. 17.—Average price of United States type 12, grade B4F, flue-cured tobacco, for the week ended October 16, was 21.7 cents a pound, against 21 cents in the preceding week, according to H. A. Stich, tobacco economist.

Minneapolis-Moline Votes $6.50 on Pfd.

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Co. announced today a dividend of $6.50 on the convertible $6.50 preferred stock, payable October 26 to stock of record October 23. On December 24 last the company paid $3 on the preferred. Plants of this farm implement maker are located at Minneapolis and Hopkins, Minn., and Moline, Ill.

Clark Equipment Special.

Clark Equipment Co., manufacturers of automotive parts, with principal plants in Michigan, declared a special dividend of $3 on the common stock, payable in $100 par value 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock. The dividend is payable Decemebr 1 to stock of record October 30.

Lumber Exports.

Hard and softwood lumber exports the first eight months of 1937 totaled 1,164,923,000 board feet, compared with 1,157,447,000 board feet for the same period of 1936, the Commerce Department announced yesterday.

Bank and Surety Stocks Hit Lows

New York, Oct. 17.—New York City bank stocks declined further to reach a new low for the year during the closing day of last week, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster, the aggregate market value of 16 leading issues at that time amounting to $1,475,020,000. There was a slight improvement later in the day, however, the aggregate value closing at $1,498,606,000, against $1,588,975,000 on October 8, a net decrease for the week of $90,369,000, or 5.69 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also declined sharply during the past week to reach new low levels at the close. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on October 15 totaled $496,979,000 (the new low), compared with $532,764,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $35,785,000, or 6.72 per cent.

Changes Weighed In Security Act

By the Associated Press.

Far-reaching changes in the social security act will be considered at the first meeting here of the Social Security Advisory Council called for November 5 and 6.

The council was created to study problems including the advisability of commencing monthly old-age pensions prior to January 1, 1942—the date now fixed by the law—increasing the size of such payments and extending them to persons who become incapacitated prior to age 65.

The public is represented by 12 members of the council, employers and employes by six each.

Gold Importations Decline Sharply

Gold imports totaled $17,960,910 during the week ended October 8, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. This was a sharp drop under the imports of $47,773,080 in the previous week.

Silver imports totaled $1,426,654 and $1,488,188 in the respective weeks.

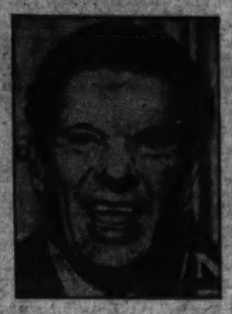
Bob Burns Says—



Some scientist said "The very fact that the traffic is getting so heavy will scare a lot of people out of owning an automobile." I want'ta tell him that ain't gonna work.

I don't think anybody ever hated traffic like Grandpaw Snazzy. He use'ta say he wouldn't fight that traffic if you gave him a car, but when I went home not long ago, there he was with a great big, brand-new automobile. I says, "Grandpaw, I thought you said you was satisfied to be a pedestrian the rest of your life—what changed your mind?"

He says, "Well, I'll tell you, Robin, I was standin' on the street corner not long ago and when I saw three automobiles chasin' one pedestrian, I decided right then and there I was on the wrong end of the sport!"

Park Loiterers Rounded Up in Slasher Hunt

spot between Taft and Calvert bridges after Miss McMillen, seeking a party of friends on a picnic, lost her way. The madman pulled her behind a pile of brick and stones in thick underbrush, knocked her unconscious and hacked her unmercifully.

According to Miss McMillen, her attacker was about 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighed about 150 pounds, and had a dark complexion. He was between 35 and 40, and wore a blue suit and gray felt hat.

The George Washington junior, who was on her way to a picnic in the park when the attack took place, is recovering satisfactorily. "As yet she shows no evidence of shock," said her uncle, Robert A. Young, of 219 Whittier street northwest.

"She is still weak from loss of blood, but did not want to stay in the hospital," he continued. "She has a fine constitution and a well-balanced nervous system and we are sure she will be all right."

Handbag Is Found.

Sergt. Stanley Kitchen, of the Park Police, yesterday found Miss McMillen's handbag in Rock Creek about 200 yards from the scene of the attack. It was lying under a foot of water. It contained the student's notebook and a bottle of ketchup, her contribution to the picnic lunch.

Her pocketbook, which she said had been in the bag, was missing. It contained only $1 or $2. Her hat was found near the stone wall behind which the man assaulted her. The spot is out of view of both the Calvert Street and the Connecticut Avenue bridges.

Police expressed belief that the man may have run in the direction of the Zoon and dropped the bag in the creek on the way.

Miss McMillen is a member of the Colonial Campus Club, the group of girls who were holding the outing. She had intended to accompany them to the picnic ground, but was delayed by a conferenc with Prof. Lowell J. Ragatz, of the G. W. history department, for whom she was typing a manuscript.

She received instructions as to how to reach the picnic site, but turned right instead of left on the bridge path after descending the steps into the park from Belmont road. It was then that the man approached her and dragged her behind a pile of stones and bricks.

She told police it was nearly an hour before she regained consciousness completely. She then stumbled to her feet and wandered dazedly along the path until she encountered Philip Wood, of 2643 Woodley place. He called police, who had Miss McMillen taken to Emergency Hospital. She was treated for lacerations and taken home. Dr. Frank A. Hornaday is attending her.

The picknickers told police of seeing a heavy-set man loitering near their camp site and smiling at them. They attached no significance to the incident at the time.

Free Ross or Admit He Has Died, Wife Begs of Kidnapers

Chicago, Oct. 17 (U.P.).—The wife of kidnaped Charles S. Ross, retired manufacturer of greeting cards and valentines, today issued from her bedside an appeal to his abductors to release her husband or to admit that he was dead.

Mrs. Ross, under care of a physician and near nervous collapse, issued her appeal through her attorney, Edmund Cummings, jr.

The appeal said Mrs. Ross had "agreed to and met all demands" of the kidnapers, a statement believed to indicate that a fruitless ransom had been paid.

Merchants Request Ship Strike Truce

Miami, Fla., Oct. 17 (U.P.).—Merchants appealed tonight to shippers and representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, in an effort to effect a truce in a strike of an estimated 8,000 stevedores in nine South Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Stating they were the "innocent victims" of the strike, a committee of merchants asked the steamship lines and union officials to declare a one-week truce until negotiations could be started. The merchants were anxious for loading and unloading of ships to be resumed.

N. Y. Woman Plans Hop To Dominican Republic

New York, Oct. 17 (AP). — An Ecuadorean government-sponsored "Good Will" flight from the United States to the Dominican Republic will be made early next month by Senora Hermelinda Urvina Briones, she announced today.

Senora Briones, diminutive wife of a New York restaurant owner and reputedly the only South American woman with a license to fly in the United States, said she is undertaking the flight at the suggestion of Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ecuadorean ambassador in Washington. She is the sister-in-law of a sister of President Paez of Ecuador.

N. Y. Vote Drive Opens.

The New York City Voters' Democratic organization of Washington announced yesterday the opening of headquarters at 1406 G street northwest, from where a campaign will be conducted on behalf of the Democratic ticket opposing Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. The organization plans a correspondence campaign, a rally and other activities according to H. J. Rhatigan, its secretary.

Tom McCarthy

Finds All Is Quiet Along the Potomac.

IT'S NOT that they're lazy. They simply haven't anything to do. However, it hasn't worried them. And two of them have been there for more than 20 years. They're not going to start worrying now.

TOM McCARTHY.

It's the peacefulness of the place that got me, though. Honest, it was almost too much of a good thing. I had to fight to keep awake.

The man on the morning shift, who has been there about a quarter of a century, has the best break of the lot. He doesn't have anything to do either, but he has an assistant to help him do it.

All day long and all night long, at least one of the four is on duty in the tender's house over the Fourteenth Street Bridge. Thirty to forty thousand cars speed over the bridge in a day's time, and the little house upstairs shakes with the vibration. But it doesn't bother any of them. They figure they can stand the vibration, just as long as it doesn't get so bad that they can't balance the checker board on their knees.

Of course the man on the morning shift usually gets in more games of checkers. He has an assistant. The assistant has been on the bridge less than a dozen years but he still puts up a mighty stiff game. He runs wild with his kings.

However, the other boys have their innings too. They all like their job so well, that they get to work about an hour ahead of schedule. And you can polish off at least a game or two in that time.

I'm really not sure what they do outside of playing checkers. I guess maybe they look up the river, and then down the river. And then maybe they throw another shovel of coal into the old heater in the center of the room. When the quiet becomes earsplitting they turn on the radio.

* * * *

THERE MUST be something peculiar about that little house, above the bridge. I know it started to get me. In ten minutes I had my feet up on the stove, and was all ready to hole in for the winter. It became almost an effort to talk, and my head started to nod forward.

"What do you do up here?" I mumbled sleepily.

Mr. Griffin, who has been there about 25 years, put the checkboard on a table, and thought for a minute.

"We open the bridge," he said.

"About how often?" My "often" was sort of smothered in a yawn.

"Well," he said, "we had one through this morning."

I asked him how long it took for the opening and closing of the bridge.

"We can get it open and shut in four minutes unless a slow tug is going through," the assistant said.

"But you don't have to open it so often now, do you?"

"Not near so many times as we used to," Mr. Griffin said. "We used to open the bridge 14 or 15 times a day, but now 3 or 4 times a day is enough. People complained about being held up in traffic, so the orders went out for the tugs to cut down the smoke stacks. Now they go under without us needing to touch a thing."

* * * *

IT'S NEVER been exactly high pressure work in the little house over the bridge, but things are better than ever since that order went out from the War Department for the tugs to cut their smokestacks.

There's always been a little better than a modicum of leisure. But now there's an ultra-leisure, which makes the promises of the "Abundant Life" seem almost meagre.

"Yes, we do have a little spare time," Mr. Griffin admitted. "Of course one of the four has to oil the motor once a day, tighten up a bolt here and there, and then we have to pull those levers to open and close he bridge.

After that we do get a chance to sit down."

* * * *

"Anything exciting ever happen?"

"Well, they've had some accidents on the bridge, Mr. Griffin said, "but I didn't just happen to see them. Not so much ever happens."

"Anybody ever come up to take a look at the house?"

"Once in a while, but I don't think many people know we're up here," Mr. Griffin said.

"How about these tugs that go through here regularly? Do you ever get to know any of the men on them?"

"Can't say as we do," was the reply.

"Well doesn't anything unusual ever happen?"

"Now that I think of it, one of the men did fall down the stairs and knock his teeth out," Mr. Griffin said. "Of course that was a dozen years ago."

"Well how about the machinery, does that ever get stuck?"

"Can't recall that it does," Mr. Griffin said.

"How about the man in the house on the railroad bridge down the river? I suppose you folks know each other since you both have to open your bridges at the same time."

"Can't say that we do know him," they told me. "Nope, never did get around to finding out who he is."

D. S. Freeman To Be Keynote Chest Speaker

Editor-Biographer Will Address Mass Meeting November 8.

The principal address at the mass meeting and pageant at Constitution Hall at 8:15 p. m. November 8, opening the tenth anniversary campaign of the Community Chest, will be delivered by Douglas Southall Freeman Lee's biographer, editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader and visiting professor of journalism at Columbia University.

Dr. Freeman's acceptance of the invitation to speak was announced yesterday by Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the mass meeting committee. Chairman Fleming and Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Chest, also will sepak.

The Marine Band orchestra of 40 pieces, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, will play that evening. A continuously moving processional pageant depicting the work of the various Chest agencies will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest.

Services Given to Children.

Fifty-nine of the 64 Washington welfare agencies in the Community Chest are devoting part of their services to children, it was announced yesterday by Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest. He said "studies of innumerable cases of adults who present social problems — crime, dependency, chronic illness, both physical and mental—prove conclusively that most of these problems began in childhood."

Community Chest contributors in the past year, said Willett, provided medical care for 24,000 children, a recreation program for 13,000, cared for 18,000 needy children in their own homes and about 1,800 in foster homes. Services of a visiting nurse were supplied to 12,000 children, 3,200 were sent to hospitals and 11,200 were brought to attending clinics.

Mental Outlook Protected.

More than 600 children needing slight specialized training and treatment were treated in the past year by the Washington Institute for Mental Hygiene.

The 18 settlements, boys' clubs and youth organizations in the Chest protected by personal attention more than 13,000 normal children whose outlook was being endangered by bad environment. Sports, games, clubs and after-school classes were supplied.

In all, 4,575 runaway, lost, or homeless children were cared for in Washington this year by either the Travelers Aid Society or the Salvation Army.

Posses Seek Suspect In Policemen's Death

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 17 (U.P.)—Heavily armed posses, guided by lanterns, tonight searched the woods and swamps of Pinellas County for a colored man accused of shooting and killing two policemen. The fugitive was J. O. Moses, accused of killing Policeman James A. Thornton and W. G. Newberry on a circus ground.

Man, 73, Confesses Beating Wife to Death

St. Louis, Oct. 17 (AP). — Police Chief George H. Ward of suburban University City, said tonight that Thomas Hayes, 73, had confessed beating his 70-year-old wife to death with an ax because she had failed to prepare his breakfast.

Bladder Weakness

When bladder is irritated and kidneys sluggish you may have to get up often at night—sometimes flow is difficult and smarts and burns.

You probably need a good diuretic and kidney stimulant such as GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules to help restore kidneys and bladder to normal activity. Get a 35 cent box and get results—don't accept a counterfeit.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Song recital by Rosa Ponselle in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon with Stuart Ross as accompanist and assisting artist. Program of operatic arias by Verdi, Bizet and Chaikovski, and songs by Paradisi, Chaikovski, Brahms, Fontenailles, Bizet, Giles Higgins, Greig, Herbert Brewer, Rakhmaninov and Frank La Forge.

Appearing in the season's first Sunday matinee under the management of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, Rosa Ponselle was welcomed yesterday by an audience that filled Constitution Hall and demonstrated its admiration for the Metropolitan Opera soprano. The throng seemed to be animated by that ready responsiveness which stimulates an artist, and the enthusiasm of the auditors was matched by the vivacity of the singer.

Miss Ponselle was in excellent voice, and that means that its variety of color and its dramatic cogency were fully displayed. Her program, plentifully strewn with familiar items, was one calculated to please by its appeal to the average memory. It began with the aria, "Addio del passato," from "La Traviata," which was sung with as much histrionism as though the occasion were not a recital but a performance of one of the soprano's most effective roles. The other arias offered were "Les tringles des sistres tintaient" from "Carmen" and "Adieu, Forets" from Chaikovski's "Orleanskaya Deva."

Throughout the recital Miss Ponselle chose to mime as well as sing, calling upon her acting ability to point her lyrics. This was occasionally overdone, as in her reading of Brahms' "Vergebliches Staendchen," but for the most part it served its emphatic purpose without detracting from musical values.

Her list of songs included Paradisi's "Quel Ruscelletto," Chaikovski's "Nur wer die Sehnsucht Kennt," Bizet's "Ouvre ton coeur," Higgins' "My Lovely Celia," Grieg's "Eros," Brewer's "The Fairy Pipers," Rakhmaninov's "The Soldier's Wife," and Frank La Forge's "Into the Light." As for novelties, the printed program contained but one: "A l'Aime" by the neglected composer, Fontenailles, but in her extra numbers Miss Ponselle included two: "Caliban" by Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco and Michael Head's "Slumber Song of the Madonna."

Stuart Ross accompanied with fact and competence. As assisting artist, he contributed two groups, the first consisting of Bach transcriptions by Kelberin and Samarov, and the second Brahm's G minor rhapsody and Chopin's B minor etude.

Job Placements Show Marked Rise

Marked improvement in placement of job applicants in September by the United States Employment Service was reported yesterday by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

"Public employment offices," she said, "reported the second highest total of private placements in September for any month in their entire history. The volume of 239,596 placements was 42.8 per cent higher than the number reported in Septmber, 1936, and 5.1 per cent higher than in August of this year."

In addition, the offices made 103,906 placements in Government service, on public buildings and construction projects or with contractors operating on such projects, and 2,527 assignments on relief work.

In the District of Columbia there were 2,193 placements in private work, an increase of 19.2 per cent over the number in August, and 229 in public employment.

Ruhland Prods At School Delay In Yielding Site

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday said that he would ask school officials for an explanation of the delay in removing 300 colored pupils from the Jones Elementary School, First and L street northwest, which eventually will be replaced by the first health center.

He said that a "clear understanding" had been reached prior to inclusion of the health center item in the 1938 District appropriations act that the school would be vacated by January 1.

Because school officials said that they could find no room for the Jones School pupils by that time, the Commissioners Friday were forced to issue an order delaying the health center construction indefinitely.

At the same time Dr. Ruhland stated that he had decided not to insist upon having a third story added to the first health center to provide quarters for the health department laboratory, now stationed in the District Building.

He said he will await construction of the Municipal Center and will ask that the laboratory be stationed there. It is doubtful, however, that space will be available in the first unit of the Municipal Center for which the Commissioners expect to ask funds in the next supply bill.

The District heads had proposed making provision for the laboratory in the second health center, which is included in the 1939 budget estimates, but Dr. Ruhland objected because the structure will be located in the Southwest.

The health officers' change of mind will permit the present plans for the first health center to proceed as soon as the site is made available without resort to Congress for a deficiency appropriation.

Steam Suffocates Two Taking Turkish Bath

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 17 (AP).—Two men died in a Turkish bath house today of what Coroner E. E. Smith said was steam suffocation and heat prostration. The men, Harry Goldberg, 59, and Isaac Goldfarb, 58, both tailors, were found dead on the floor of the steam room by Charles Skilken, manager of the bath house.

Landon Sounds G. O. P. Tocsin On Air Tuesday

re-election next year and whose political destinies might be immediately and profoundly affected by such a national party session.

Fears Local Issues.

Holding that Congressional elections in off-years are largely decided on local issues, Landon is said to fear that a special convention, adopting a set of policies nationally, might seriously handicap some of the Congressional candidates.

There arose, also, the possibility that in his radio talk the former Sunflower State Governor would take cognizance of the special session of Congress called by President Roosevelt, and seek to capitalize on some of the discord that is expected to be manifested within the ranks of Democrats in both houses.

Since the Democratic landslide last year he has voiced little criticism of the Administration, but with next year's elections approaching it was considered possible that he might be setting off something of a Republican drive to build up the party's representation in Congress.

'Shun Money, Seek Grace,' BishopTells Episcopal Church

Cincinnati, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Right Rev. George Craig Stewart, bishop of Chicago, challenged the Protestant Episcopal Church today to take for its slogan, "Not more money but more grace."

He called upon the more than 2,000,000 members of the denomination, in a sermon at the church's general convention, "to invoke a movement of the spirit which shall bring unto us year by year . . . the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit."

The convention, nearing the end of its fifty-second triennial session, will turn its attention tomorrow to finances. Action on a $7,500,000 budget for the next three years was the most important business to be disposed of before adjournment Tuesday.

Man Is Mutilated In Mystery Attack Aboard His Yacht

Mineola, N. Y., Oct. 17 (AP).—Wilbur E. Johnson, 54, well-to-do New York advertising executive, was the victim of a mysterious mutilating attack Saturday aboard his 60-foot yacht off the south shore of Long Island near his Freeport home, it was revealed tonight.

Mrs. Lida Hamlyn, 39, former housekeeper for the widowed Johnson, told police she found him unconscious in the cabin of the yacht after he had gone below to take a nap.

She said no one was aboard the boat except Johnson and herself and that she revived Johnson, then sailed to the yacht's base. Both the woman, wife of a painter and mother of a 20-year-old son, and Johnson professed ignorance as to the manner of the attack.

Own Poem Read at Rites For Robert V. Johnson

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—A poem which Robert Underwood Johnson himself wrote for that purpose was made as his requiem at funeral services in the New York University chapel today. There was no eulogy.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University; Dr. Walter Damrosch, composer and conductor, and Dr. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times, were among the notables present. Dr. Johnson, poet, author, editor and Ambassador to Italy in 1921-22, died Thursday at his home here.

3 to Face Court Today In Denhardt Killing

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 17 (U.P.)—Three brothers—Dr. E. S., Jack and Roy Garr—will go to trial tomorrow charged with the murder of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, soldier-politician, killed on the eve of his second trial for the slaying of their sister.

The Library counts

UP TO FIVE

THE booklets which we speak of, collectively, as "The Homestead Little Library" now add up to five titles. Here's a list of them:

I. Riding and Driving
II. Tennis
III. Golf
IV. Living at The Homestead
V. "The Cure".

Each of them, you see, has something to say about the pleasant way of life here, though only one (No. 4) tries to comment upon more than a single phase of it.

Each of them, though, is a pleasant-to-read picture book, and each does actually give a hint of how The Homestead differs from other "luxury resorts."

The little volumes—any or all of them—will be sent you, gladly, if they may interest you.

Autumn is one of the seasons (the other is spring) when The Homestead is busiest and is most brilliant socially. Do let us know if we may expect you to be with us this year.

The Washington booking office of The Homestead is in the Mayflower Hotel in charge of Miss Frances Curtis. Make inquiry there and you'll find interested, helpful assistance

Browder Pledges Reds to Roosevelt

Pittsburgh, Oct. 17 (AP).—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in America, today called for "a new political instrument to defeat reactionism" and pledged Communist support to President Roosevelt until that "instrument" could be devised.

"If President Roosevelt will let us work out things for ourselves," he said, "we will promise him 100 per cent unconditional support of the Communist Party."

Discussing the President's Chicago speech, Browder said:

"We have been the bitterest critic of Roosevelt's foreign policy in the past. His neutrality was unneutral and hypocritical and was designed to help Fascist nations in war. Now we are glad to see it changed."
